It will continue to be our earnest prayer that the blessing of God may rest upon all your Majesty's undertakings, and that it may be the will of a Merciful Providence to preserve for many years a life not only most precious in our eyes, but of unspeakable value to the countless inhabitants of your Majesty's mighty empire.

Given at our House of Convocation, under our Common Seal, this 15th day of April, in the year of our Lord God, 1861.

Whitehall, April 23, 1861.

THE following Address of Condolence to the Queen, on the occasion of the death of Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, having been transmitted to the Right Honourable Sir George Cornewall Lewis, Bart., Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, for presentation, has been presented accordingly to Her Majesty, who was pleased to receive it very graciously.

To the QUEEN'S Most Excellent Majesty. The humble Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, humbly beg leave to approach the Throne with the expression of our sincere condolence upon the melancholy occasion of the death of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent.

It would scarcely become us, in addressing your Majesty, to dwell upon the virtues of that August Lady; but we may be permitted to express how deeply, in common with all England, we revere the memory of her who taught your Majesty to know, and to love your faithful people.

If under so heavy an affliction, human sympathy can convey any consolation, we can sincerely assure your Majesty, that in no body of your Majesty's subjects is there a sympathy more deep and genuine than in the University of Cambridge.

It is consoling to reflect that the Royal Lady whose loss we deplore, did not fail of her just reward. For more than twenty years she beheld her highest hopes fulfilled: she saw your Majesty blest as a wife and mother beyond the common lot of humanity: as a Queen beyond the common lot of Royalty, and she has left your Majesty secure in the affections of an united and a loyal people.

We heartily pray that the Divine blessing may continue to rest upon your Majesty, and that the pain of your Majesty's late bereavement may be soothed by witnessing the growing virtues and increasing happiness of each one of your Royal children, more particularly of the illustrious Prince whom the favour of your Majesty has confided to our care, and in whom we rejoice to think that your Royal House will be strengthened and adorned.

May God bless and preserve your Majesty and your Royal Consort, and may He be pleased to grant you many happy years to reign over a contented and religious people.

It will be consolatory to your Majesty to reflect that Her late Royal Highness had secured the grateful affection and esteem of all your subjects; and this we venture to say arose, not only from her own excellent qualities, but from the recollection that it was from her that you received those principles which have produced in your Majesty so brilliant an example of public and private virtue.

Feeling the deepest interest in all that concerns the happiness of your Majesty and all the Royal Family, we add to our condolences on the present occasion our fervent prayer, that your Majesty may long be spared to reign over a happy and united people, and in the enjoyment of every possible domestic felicity.
