Whitehall, April 20, 1863.

THE following Addresses of Congratulation to the Queen, on the Marriage of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, having been transmitted to the Right Honourable Sir George Grey, Bart., Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, for Presentation, have accordingly been presented by him to Her Majesty, who has been pleased to receive the same very graciously:

May it please your Majesty,

WE, the Body of English Presbyterian Ministers, in and near the cities of London and Westminster, beg to offer to your Majesty our heartfelt congratulations on the occasion of the Marriage of the eldest Son of your Royal House with Her Royal Highness the Princess Alexandra of Denmark.

A union founded, not on the ground of State policy, but on the far higher ground of mutual regard and affection, cannot but be alike grateful to your Majesty's own feelings and congenial with the wishes and hopes of your loyal and devoted people. The abundant testimony borne to the virtues and amiable dispositions of the Princess Alexandra, cannot but inspire the happiest confidence in Her Royal Highness as the Wife of the Prince of Wales, both in his exalted public position and in the sanctities of domestic life; indeed, the love and honour His Royal Highness bears towards his chosen bride, are the best pledge that could be given that she is worthy of the admiration and attachment of this great Country.

We are persuaded that your Majesty's Children can never form a new home, without a deep and abiding feeling of what they owe to that home of their early years, which has been an unspeakable blessing to them and the whole Nation.

Most fervently do we join in the prayer now ascending from all hearts, that Heaven's choicest blessing may rest on your new Daughter and Her Royal Husband, and that your Majesty may have unfailing comfort and happiness in them and all your Children.
