War Office, August 20, 1863.

THE Secretary of State for War has received a Despatch and its Enclosures, addressed to him by Lieutenant-General Cameron, C.B., Commanding the Troops in New Zealand, of which the following are copies :

*Head Quarters, New Plymouth,
June 9, 1863.*

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to report that the rebel natives having collected in considerable numbers,* about 15 miles from New Plymouth, on the left bank of the Katikara River, which forms the boundary of the European land in that direction, and runs within a few hundred yards of St. George's redoubt on the Sataraimaka block, I decided upon crossing the river and attacking their position, as it appeared likely from the care with which they had fortified it that they intended to make a stand, and that a favourable opportunity would thus be afforded of striking a decisive blow.

I accordingly marched out of New Plymouth at nine o'clock on the night of the 3rd instant, with nearly the whole of the regular troops forming the garrison of the town, and proceeded towards the Katikara river. In order that the march might not be impeded, the guns, mortars, and reserve ammunition, had been sent on a few hours before, under a strong escort, and no tents or baggage of any kind were allowed to accompany the column. The officers and men carried each a blanket and a day's provisions cooked. The column having been joined on the line of march by detachments of the 57th Regiment, from the outposts, arrived at St. George's Redoubt a little before four o'clock on the morning of the 4th instant. The strength and composition of the force thus assembled, including the garrison of the redoubt, are shown in the margin.†

* Reported to be six hundred.

Before leaving New Plymouth I had arranged with Captain Mayne, R.N., that Her Majesty's ship "Eclipse" should be at the mouth of the Katikara River before daybreak, ready to co-operate in the attack.

I had found it very difficult to obtain accurate information regarding the points where the river could be most easily crossed; and it was also impossible, by observation from St. George's Redoubt, to ascertain the exact nature of the enemy's defences. The left bank of the river was about 60 or 70 feet high, everywhere very steep, and in some places covered with high fern. The main road leading from St. George's Redoubt across the mouth of the river to the left of the enemy's position was known to be strongly defended by a line of rifle-pits half-way up the left bank of the river, and as this road passed through a large patch of flax bushes, when it reached the table land, it appeared difficult to force the position at that point.

I was informed by Mr. Bayley, a New Plymouth settler, that about 600 yards above the ford at the mouth of the river, there was another ford, and a track by which the left bank could be easily ascended. Higher up the river on a commanding point, about 600 yards to our left of this ford, and 400 yards from the bank of the river, the enemy had enclosed some wharres with a kind of redoubt, consisting of a parapet and rifle-pits, which appeared to be his principal work; and between this and the main road, the position was defended at various points by lines of rifle-pits. A prisoner captured a few days before had reported that a Kainga, or village, about a mile down the coast, was also entrenched.

The plan of attack which I considered best adapted to this state of things, was to pass the 57th Regiment across the river under cover of the guns at the last-mentioned ford, to detach the two leading parties of the "advance," as soon as they reached the top of the bank, to turn the rifle-pits and flax bushes at the road, the third party of the "advance" to extend to its front to protect this movement, and the main body of the regiment to show a front to the left, towards the redoubt, so as to keep the enemy in check. The remainder of the force (with the guns and mortars, if necessary), to cross the mouth of the river as soon as the defences of the main road were turned, and to advance to support the main body of the 57th in the attack of the redoubt, and afterwards of the Kainga.

These arrangements were successfully carried out. Soon after daybreak, having given all the instructions necessary to Colonel Warre, C.B., of the 57th Regiment, and the Officers in command of the three parties of the advance, as well as Captain Mercer, Royal Artillery, I directed Colonel Warre to move the 57th up the river, and to place it opposite the ford, by which it was to cross. Captain Mercer followed with the three Armstrong guns, which he placed in position a little to the right of the 57th Regiment; I posted the detachment, 65th and 70th Regiment, under the command of Major Mulock, in rear of St. George's Redoubt, ready to cross the river at any point when ordered.

The 70th threw out a line of skirmishers to the edge of the bank of the river, to check any attempt the enemy might make to interfere with the passage. The "Eclipse" stationed herself as close to the mouth of the river as her draught of water would permit.

At a quarter before 7 o'clock, everything being ready and the pre-concerted signal having been given, Captain Mercer's half battery and the "Eclipse" opened fire upon the enemy's position, throwing shells with great precision and effect into his principal work.

After a few rounds the 57th crossed the river, and ascending the left bank with some difficulty, gained the plateau without opposition, the two leading parties then wheeled quickly to the right without replying to the musketry fire opened upon them from the rifle-pits in every part of the enemy's position, and under the immediate direction of Colonel Warre moved rapidly to the rear of the rifle-pits, and flax bushes at the road, which the enemy hastily abandoned, retreating in the greatest confusion toward the Kainga, closely pursued by the two parties. When I perceived these parties turning the defences of the road, I moved the 65th and 70th across the mouth of the river, ascended the left bank without opposition, and pushed them on towards the Redoubt, which from the heavy musketry fire, and cheering of the 57th, I inferred was being attacked by that Regiment.

The third party of the "advance," and the main body of the 57th, commanded, in the absence of Colonel Warre, who was with the two leading parties, by Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Logan, had, after crossing the river, obeyed the instructions they had received; but after replying for some time to a sharp musketry fire, opened upon them from the redoubt, and rifle-pits near it, they assaulted the work with the bayonet, and entering it with a rush, shot down or bayoneted all who remained inside to defend it. I had the satisfaction of witnessing the gallantry of the 57th at this point, and the desperate resistance made by the enemy in their rifle-pits. Major Mulock's column arrived at the spot before the contest was terminated, but their assistance was not required, and I moved them towards the Kainga to support the two leading parties of the "advance," who were met returning after burning all the wharres of the Kainga, which had not been entrenched, as reported. The enemy had now been driven from every part of his position and was seen from the "Eclipse" in precipitate flight down the coast, which afforded her an opportunity of throwing a few shells among them.

Knowing that it was hopeless to attempt to overtake any of them, and being desirous that the troops should return to New Plymouth before dark, I withdrew them from the left bank of the Katikara, and ordered them to march back to the town, after a short rest. They reached New Plymouth about 5 P.M., and in the twenty hours of their absence, these troops had made a night march of 15 miles, had taken part in an action with the enemy, and had marched back the same distance without a straggler, although many had been on duty the previous night.

Our loss in this engagement was small, as will be seen in the return of the casualties herewith enclosed. Twenty-eight of the enemy were found dead inside of the redoubt, and one on the road leading to the Kainga; but it is probable that there were many more killed and wounded.

There can be no doubt that the enemy was taken completely by surprise, all the preparations for the march having been kept secret, and he was thrown into confusion by the suddenness and rapidity of the attack.

I cannot speak too highly of the conduct of all the officers and men present in this engagement, or of the conspicuous gallantry displayed by the 57th, on whom the brunt of the action fell. The movements of this regiment were most ably directed by Colonel Warre, whose zeal and activity throughout the action I beg to bring to your favourable notice, and to that of the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief.

I transmit a very clear and interesting report from that officer, and I would wish to draw your attention to the gallant and meritorious conduct of the officers therein mentioned, particularly of Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Logan, who commanded at the attack of the redoubt: of Captain Shortt, and the officers commanding the three parties of the "advance," viz., Lieutenants Brutton and Waller, and Ensign Duncan.

I cannot omit to mention the services of Captain Mercer, Royal Artillery, the excellent practice of whose guns, with those of the "Eclipse," under Captain Mayne, R.N., contributed materially to the success of the day.

I derived the greatest assistance in the field, as well as in all of the previous arrangements, from the officers of the General Staff, and of my Personal Staff, viz.:—Lieutenant-Colonel Gamble, Deputy Quartermaster-General; Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals Mouat, C.B.; Lieutenant-Colonel Hutchins, Assistant Military Secretary; Major McNeill, Aide-de-Camp; Brevet-Major Paul, Major of Brigade; and my extra Aide-de-Camp, Captain Gorton, 57th Regiment.

I may perhaps be allowed to add, that my former Assistant Military Secretary, Major Whitmore, who not long ago retired from the service to settle in this Colony, happened to arrive at New Plymouth the day before the engagement, and insisted upon accompanying me to the field.

I enclose a rough sketch of the enemy's position, showing also the movements of the troops in the course of the action.

I have, &c.,

D. A. CAMERON,
Lieutenant-General.

St. Patrick's Redoubt, Pontoko, June 4, 1863.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to report that, in compliance with the instructions received from the Lieutenant-General Commanding, I proceeded this morning with the Regiments, strength as shewn in the margin,* from St. George's Redoubt at Sataraimaka to attack the fortified posts of the rebel Maories on the opposite bank of the Katikara River. Under cover of three guns, Armstrongs, of Captain Mercer's Battery of the Royal Artillery, three divisions of selected men under the command of Lieutenants Brutton and Waller, and Ensign Duncan, were pushed forward, and crossed a broad and very entangled gully, through which the Katikara runs, and ascended the opposite bank, reforming on the crest of the hill, which they were enabled to gain without opposition, owing to the admirable manner in which Captain Mercer's guns were served, and the precision of their fire.

Her Majesty's ship "Eclipse," having on board his Excellency the Governor, Sir G. Grey, also did good service by the fire of Armstrong shells at the rebel wharres over the heads of the advancing parties. The support of four companies,† under command of Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Logan, followed closely on the attacking parties by the same route. The enemy opened fire on the advance directly they appeared on the level ground, but instead of replying to this fire, the parties, under Lieutenants Brutton and Waller, wheeled to the right, and extending as far as practicable, pushed across the level ground covered with fern, in many places almost impassable, towards the old pah on the crest of the rising ground, on the left of the mouth of the river, as previously arranged, so as to turn the rifle-pits in that position, and open the road leading over the ford at the river's mouth. Although opposed by a considerable number of Maories, these two parties succeeded in driving the rebels from their position, opening the road, and following the natives a distance of upwards of one mile down the coast, inflicting loss upon the enemy and destroying many of their wharres.

Meanwhile Ensign Duncan had wheeled his party to the left, as also arranged, and supported by the main body under Lieutenant-Colonel Logan, pushed on towards a very strongly entrenched position, on the summit of a rising ground, about 600 yards to the left of where the parties had crossed the river. The enemy opened fire from a great number of rifle-pits constructed on a very commanding point, and from the continuous and double chain of pits surrounding the wharre it was our object to destroy. Nothing daunted by the serious opposition and the heavy fire of the enemy, Ensign Duncan pushed steadily forward, closely followed by the divisions under Captains Shortt and Russell under the immediate command of Lieutenant-Colonel Logan, and supported by Captain Woodall, and Lieutenant Thompson, with the two remaining divisions into which the force was divided. In a few minutes the fire was returned, but finding it of no avail against an almost invisible enemy, concealed in rifle-pits, the whole rushed forwards, and vied with each other in entering the position, jumping over the rifle-pits from which they met with a most determined opposition: the Maories fighting desperately to the last; a hand to hand combat ensued, which was only terminated by the wharres catching fire, and burning many of the Maori defenders in the ruins. Twenty-one Maories were taken out of the rifle-pits killed, three are known to have been burned in the smaller wharre, and four in the larger, and it is believed that several others perished in the flames, which with the stench arising from the consuming flesh prevented any accurate information being obtained: one Maori was picked up dead on the road, and many more, wounded, escaped, and were seen to take refuge and hide themselves in the fern and bush. Thus, in the short space of one hour twenty-two Maories, killed, were brought away in the carts, as many more were wounded and destroyed in the burning wharres, and a complete victory gained over a savage enemy by the bayonet alone; not over five rounds of ammunition per man having been expended in the encounter. I have to regret the loss of one man killed,* two men seriously, I fear, dangerously wounded,† and seven men otherwise slightly wounded,‡ in all one man killed and nine men wounded. The enemy were evidently completely surprised, and were so confused by the admirable manner in which Captain Mercer's Armstrong guns were served, that the fire from the rifle-pits was very wild, and it was only at the assault, when the enemy were speedily overpowered by numbers, that the serious casualties occurred.

It is impossible to speak in terms of too high praise of the admirable behaviour of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the 57th Regiment engaged.

The Lieutenant-General was himself an eye-witness of the rapid and regular manner in which each party performed the duties allotted to it. I may, therefore, be pardoned from further allusion to the successful result of these operations, in which I naturally, on account of the officers and men engaged, feel such pride; but I trust I may be permitted to bring the names of the following officers and men to the notice of the Lieutenant-General Commanding, viz.: Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Logan, Captains Shortt, and Russell, Lieutenants Brutton and Waller, and Ensigns Duncan and Douglass. I fear, in naming the above, I may be inadvertently doing injustice to others, as it appears difficult to determine whether Captain Shortt or Ensign Duncan was first to jump into the redoubt, and they were closely followed by Privates (2700) J. Donaghy, and (2189) B. Stagpool, and by the other officers and men. To Lieutenant and Adjutant C. M. Clarke, I have to offer my best thanks, for his untiring zeal and energy (for a considerable time on foot, his horse having got away in crossing the ford and gully); and I cannot refrain from bringing to the Lieutenant-General's notice the names of three civilians, Ensign Mace, Taranaki Militia, who volunteered his services, and lent me his horse, when mine got away in crossing the gully, thereby enabling me to direct a considerable portion of the operations, which I could not have done on foot. Mr. R. Parris, Assistant Native Secretary, accompanied the advance parties across the ravine and the Katikara river, and remained with me during the day. The other civilian is Mr. Arthur Bayley, on whose land the redoubt, now occupied by a portion of the regiment under my command, is built. Mr. Bayley's knowledge of the locality enabled Lieutenants Brutton and Thompson, on the 18th instant, to cut off a party of Maories, killing two, and wounding several others. He led the advanced parties across the gullies this morning, and behaved very gallantly. I also beg to bring to the Lieutenant-General's notice Quarter-Master Martin-dale, who is always ready to accompany the troops into the field, and to whom is due the direction of the transport, and carrying out the details of the Quarter-Master-General's directions regarding the conveyance of ammunition and stores, to St. George's Redoubt earlier in the night.

Serjeant Cleary and nine men of the 70th Regiment were attached to Ensign Duncan's party of volunteers, and rendered good service. One of this party was wounded in the attack on the entrenched wharre. Apologising for the length of this report which the detail renders necessary.

I have, &c.,

HENRY J. WARRE, Colonel, Commanding 57th Regiment and Outposts.

As I consider Mr. Mace's conduct deserves special notice, I beg to state that he has lately been in charge of the Mounted Orderlies, is an Ensign in the Taranaki Militia, and has frequently been of great service to me since I have been in command of the Outposts; his courage is proverbial, and I myself saw him gallop after three or four Maories, and shoot one of them.

I append a sketch of the operations, and short report from Captain Shortt, who led the advance on the left.

H. J. WARRE, Colonel.

June 4, 1863.

SIR, I HAVE the honour to report that I marched with my company, and three others of the 57th Regiment at daybreak this morning, acting as a reserve to the parties under Lieutenants Brutton and Waller. After the guns had fired a few rounds, the companies crossed a deep gully in succession, and ascended the high ground in the direction of the enemy's position. I extended my company, and with other men I picked up, went straight at what appeared to be a small redoubt.

Private Donaghy, of my company, and I, were the first to enter the place, closely followed by Lieutenant-Colonel Logan and Captain Russell.

On our first advance we were received with a very heavy fire, which killed one man, and wounded several of our party. The enemy made a very determined resistance, and stood upon the parapets to receive us, and were bayoneted there by our men.

I have, &c.,

W. A. SHORTT, Captain, 57th Regiment.

[The following Order in Council of the 27th of July, 1863, is re-gazetted in consequence of two typographical errors which occur in that gazetted on the 28th of July, namely: the omission, in the 9th paragraph of the Schedule attached to the Order, of the words "one of" before the words "Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State," and the substitution of the word "next" for "annexed" in the eighth line of that paragraph].

AT the Court at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the 27th day of July, 1863.

"solidate and amend the Act relating to the Volunteer Force in Great Britain," it is amongst other things enacted that "Her Majesty in Council may from time to time declare what is requisite to entitle a volunteer to be deemed an efficient volunteer, by an Order in Council, defining, for that purpose, the extent of attendance at drill to be given by the volunteer, and the course of instruction to be gone through by him, and the degree of proficiency in drill and instruction to be attained by him and his corps, such proficiency to be judged of by the Inspecting officer at the annual inspection of the corps, or otherwise, as by Order in Council is from time to time directed;" and that "The draft of any scheme to be from time to time submitted to Her Majesty in Council for approval under the present section, shall have been laid before both Houses of Parliament for one lunar month at least, either before or after or partly before and partly after the passing of this Act, during the present or for the like period during any subsequent session of Parliament, before such scheme receives the approval of Her Majesty in Council."

And whereas a draft of the scheme hereinafter mentioned (and a copy whereof is hereunto annexed) was on the 29th day of June last laid before both Houses of Parliament: and whereas one lunar month hath elapsed since that time: and whereas the said scheme hath this day been submitted to Her Majesty in Council for her approval thereof.

Now, therefore, Her Majesty, having this day taken the said scheme into consideration, doth, in pursuance and exercise of the power in Her Majesty by the said Act of Parliament in that behalf vested, and by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, hereby declare Her Royal approval of the said scheme.

Edmund Harrison.

Scheme referred to in the foregoing Order in Council.

1. A volunteer shall be entitled to be deemed an efficient volunteer, if he obtains a certificate certifying that he has fulfilled the requirements and possesses the qualifications stated in or upon such one of the annexed forms of certificate as may be applicable in his case, and not otherwise.

2. Every such certificate shall be granted as soon as may be after the thirtieth day of November in every year, and shall bear date the first day of December, and shall be evidence of the efficiency of the volunteer to whom it is granted during the year ending the thirtieth day of November next following its date.

3. Every volunteer fulfilling the requirements and possessing the qualifications aforesaid, shall be entitled to receive such a certificate of efficiency.

4. In the course of each year ending the thirtieth day of November, the adjutant of each corps, or administrative regiment, shall select from time to time such volunteers as, in his opinion, have fulfilled the requirements and possess the qualifications aforesaid, and submit their names to the commanding officer of their corps, with a view to their obtaining certificates of efficiency.

5. If the adjutant refuses to recommend any volunteer for a certificate, and the volunteer considers himself aggrieved thereby, the volunteer may appeal to the commanding officer of his corps.

6. If the commanding officer concurs in the adjutant's recommendation or refusal to recommend, he shall either sign the certificate or else approve the withholding of it, as the case may be; but if he differs from the opinion of the adjutant, he shall refer the matter to the assistant-inspector of volunteers for the district, whose decision shall be final, and who shall sign the certificate if he thinks it ought to be granted, instead of it being signed by the commanding officer and adjutant.

In the case of a corps forming part of an administrative regiment, or attached for administrative purposes to another corps, any such reference shall be made through the officer commanding such regiment or such last-mentioned corps.

7. In the case of a corps forming part of an administrative regiment, or attached for administrative purposes to another corps, the certificate shall be countersigned by the field officer commanding the administrative regiment or such last-mentioned corps, this counter-signature being held to imply merely that the field officer has no knowledge of any reason why the certificate should not be granted.

If the field officer thinks fit to withhold his counter-signature from the certificate of any volunteer, he shall refer the matter to the assistant-inspector of volunteers for the district, whose decision shall be final, and who shall countersign the certificate, if he thinks it ought to be granted.

8. Where the situation and circumstances of an artillery volunteer corps are such as, in the opinion of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, to create serious obstacles to the fulfilment by the volunteers belonging to that corps of the requirement of attendance at gun practice, the Secretary of State shall have power to dispense with that requirement.

9. Where the situation and circumstances of a rifle volunteer corps are such as, in the opinion of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, to create serious obstacles to the fulfilment by the volunteers belonging to the corps of the requirement of attendance at battalion drill such number of times within twelve months as is prescribed upon the annexed forms of certificate, the Secretary of State shall have power to reduce the number of battalion drills, and to increase proportionately the number of company drills requisite to entitle a volunteer belonging to the corps to a certificate of efficiency.

10. Where the situation and circumstances of a corps which is not of sufficient strength to constitute by itself a regiment, brigade, or battalion, are such as, in the opinion of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, to render it impracticable for the corps to be united with or attached for administrative purposes to another corps of the same arm, the Secretary of State shall have power to make from time to time such special provision respecting the granting and signature of certificates of efficiency as he may think fit.

11. Where the officer inspecting a volunteer corps at the annual inspection in any year reports that the corps is not proficient in drill and instruction to his satisfaction, then, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore provided, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State shall have power to direct the withholding of certificates of efficiency at the end of that year from all volunteers belonging to the corps.

12. The officer inspecting a volunteer corps at the annual inspection in any year, shall have power to direct the withholding of a certificate of efficiency at the end of that year, from any individual volunteer belonging to the corps, in any case in which he considers it proper to do so, on account of the want of proficiency in drill or instruction of that volunteer.

13. In case any alteration in the terms of any of the annexed forms of certificate should from time to time appear expedient, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may make the same by regulation, so as no alteration be thereby made in the amount of the requirements and qualifications stated in or upon the form, and so as none of the provisions of this Order be thereby altered.

14. Terms used in this Order, or in or upon the annexed forms of certificate, have the same meanings as they have when used in the Volunteer Act, 1863.

The term "recruit," used upon the annexed forms of certificate, means a volunteer who has never been returned as efficient in an annual return of his corps. It does not, however, include a volunteer who was at any time returned as effective in the muster roll of his corps rendered to the lieutenant of the county, under the Acts of Parliament in force before the passing of the Volunteer Act, 1863.
