War Office, August 19, 1864.

THE Secretary of State for War has received a Despatch, with its enclosures, from Lieutenant-General Sir Duncan Cameron, K.C.B., Commanding Her Majesty's Forces in New Zealand, of which the following are copies:—

*Head Quarters, Auckland,
June 7, 1864.*

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to report that the rebel natives after abandoning their entrenchment at Tauranga, as reported in my last despatch, retired to two strong paha which they had previously constructed in the ranges, about ten miles from their former position.

The season was so far advanced that I did not consider it advisable to penetrate further into the country, particularly as I had been informed by his Excellency the Governor of New Zealand that Whanganui was in imminent danger of being attacked, that the Superintendent of Napier had made an urgent application for more troops, and that it would be necessary to send reinforcements to both those settlements.

Leaving Colonel Greer, 69th Regiment, in command at Tauranga, I transferred my head quarters to Auckland, where I arrived on the 19th May, and received instructions from the Governor to send a reinforcement of 300 men to Whanganui with as little delay as possible. There being no regular troops within three days march of Auckland, and the Waikato Militia not being available for service out of the province, the colonial steamer Prince Alfred, then in the Manukau harbour, was at once despatched with orders from me to Colonel Warre, Commanding at New Plymouth, to detach 300 men of the force under his command to Whanganui.

Intelligence was afterwards received that previous to the arrival of this reinforcement at Whanganui, a party of rebel natives, 119 strong, in attempting to descend the river to attack the town, had been met and defeated with great loss by a body of about 300 friendly natives. I have received a report from Colonel Logan, Commanding at Whanganui, from which it appears that no apprehension need be entertained for the safety of that settlement.

On 28th May 300 of the 70th Regiment, withdrawn from the posts on the Waikato, embarked in the steamer Otago, for New Plymouth, to replace the detachment sent to Whanganui.

Having received instructions from the Governor to send a reinforcement of 300 men to Napier, 200 of the 2nd Battalion 14th Regiment embarked for that place on the 28th ultimo, and will be followed by the remainder in a few days.

I am withdrawing all the troops not required for the defence of Tauranga to Auckland, ready to be moved to any point that may be threatened.

The only collision between the troops and the rebels since my last despatch occurred at New Plymouth, on 30th April, when the latter attacked one of our redoubts north of the town, and were repulsed with great loss, with only one casualty on our side.

Colonel Warre's report of this attack, together with one from Major Butler, of an expedition to the south of New Plymouth, for the purpose of destroying rebel cultivations, are herewith enclosed.

The natives have not shewn themselves in the neighbourhood of any of our posts on the Waikato

During the next three months active operations will hardly be practicable in any part of New Zealand, and the greater part of the troops have huddled themselves for the winter.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) D. A. CAMERON,
Lieutenant-General.

The Secretary of State for War, War Office, London.*

SIR,

New Plymouth, April 23, 1864.

I HAVE the honour to report, for the information of the Lieutenant-General Commanding, that having as far as possible secured the position at Kaitake, I determined to reconnoitre the country to the south of Tataraimaka, to ascertain whether the rebel natives had established themselves in any entrenched position, and to destroy their crops and cultivations, whereby I hope to place a large track of country between their habitable paha and New Plymouth, and thus secure the immediate neighbourhood of the town from sudden predatory attacks.

For the above-mentioned purposes I organised a flying column, of the strength shown in the accompanying state, which I placed under the command of Major Butler, 57th Regiment, with instructions to proceed down the coast to carry out the object of the expedition. I beg herewith to transmit Major Butler's report of his proceedings, and beg most prominently to bring to the Lieutenant-General's notice the admirable manner in which Major Butler carried out his instructions, returning to New Plymouth after an absence of four days, with only one man wounded, and having cleared off, I believe I may say, every acre of cultivation within twenty miles to the south of this settlement, and at Kopua inflicting some chastisement on the rebel natives, who he found strongly posted at the edge of the bush in a paha, which I hope soon to be able to destroy.

I can fully corroborate Major Butler's report of the excellent spirit and good conduct of the whole of the regular and militia forces engaged, animated with one desire, viz.: to punish the savage perpetrators of the cruel mutilations on the remains of Captain Lloyd and his unfortunate comrades, upon whom the rebel natives appear to have practised all their ancient and most barbarous rites,—the remains of Private Gallagher, of the Taranaki Militia (Melbourne Volunteers), bearing unmistakable evidence of acts of cannibalism too atrocious to record; and these facts are not only corroborated by Lieutenant-Colonel Logan, from native accounts received by him at Wanganui, to which district the rebel natives have sent Captain Lloyd's head, but by the evidence of a native woman, the wife of Komene, who joined the force at Kopua, and has given me, through Mr. Parris, much interesting information, which I shall embody in my confidential report.

Thinking it very possible that the rebels, seeing so comparatively large a force on the move, would make some counter-attack on the outposts, I did not withdraw any of the militia from the outposts, and remained myself to take immediate steps to counteract any movement that might be made nearer the town.

On the 21st instant, the sentries at Kaitake were fired upon, showing that my idea that the rebel natives would reconnoitre our positions was correct; and on the same afternoon, at about four o'clock, I found that the rebels had penetrated within a couple of miles of the town, and fired upon some friendly natives who were at work, and who immediately came into town, and gave the alarm.

Having ridden to Oakura to visit the outposts, Major Baddeley, commanding Taranaki Militia, and Captain Woodall, 57th Regiment, immediately got together a mixed force of about 100 men (57th Regiment and Militia), and started in pursuit; but beyond the remains of a cart which the rebels had burnt, driving off the bullocks, and the evidence of their presence by numerous tracks of native feet, no further trace could be discovered; and as it was getting dark the force returned to town.

Last evening natives were again reported as being in the bush near the River Waiwakaio; and as Major Butler's force had returned, I early this morning dispatched Major Atkinson's two companies of Bushrangers by one road, and placed two parties of the 57th Regiment and Militia, one under Captain Woodall at Puketotara, and another under Lieutenant Miles on the Bell Block, in ambuscade, to intercept the rebels, should Major Atkinson succeed in driving them before him. These parties were in position before daylight, and unmistakable signs of fresh-killed sheep, and tracks through the bush, clearly showed that a considerable body of rebel natives were in the neighbourhood. Major Atkinson followed their track some miles towards Mataitawa; and as it was quite evident that they had retired in that direction, he very properly withdrew his men, and the other parties being also withdrawn, returned to town.

By the evidence of the native woman above mentioned, this marauding party is under Parengi Kingi, Meiha or Big Jack, the reported death of whom on the 6th of April I am sorry to find is not true, and Minerapa, with from thirty to forty followers, who appear, by the numerous tracks, to have been joined by others, probably from Mataitawa.

I must again assure the Lieutenant-General that notwithstanding the extremely harassing nature of the duties to which the very small force of regular troops, deducting those at outposts and employed on duties from which they cannot be withdrawn, not exceeding 250 men, is subjected, the best spirit prevails; and I am truly glad to be again able to bring to the Lieutenant-General's notice the admirable conduct of the Bushrangers, under Major Atkinson, who do not seem to know what fatigue means; and also of the new levies from Melbourne and Otago, who take their share of the labour of this harassing warfare with cheerfulness and zeal.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) H. J. WARRE, Colonel,
Commanding Troops, Taranaki.

Sir, New Plymouth, April 22, 1864.

I HAVE the honour to report that having received your instructions to proceed in command of a flying field force, for the purpose of destroying the crops, &c., of the rebel natives in the vicinity of the Kaihihi and Hangatahua rivers, the force under my command (strength as detailed in the margin*) paraded at the Oakura redoubt, * Royal Artillery—1 captain, 1 serjeant, 17 rank and file, under command of Captain Martin; Royal Engineers—1 subaltern, 4 rank and file, under command of Lieutenant Ferguson; 57th Regiment—3 captains, 3 subalterns, 1 staff, 6 serjeants, 3 drummers, 154 rank and file, under command of Captain Stewart; Taranaki Militia and Volunteers—1 field officer, 4 captains, 9 subalterns, 1 staff, 15 serjeants, 5 drummers, 302 rank and file, under command of Major Atkinson; Mounted Corps—1 captain, 1 serjeant, 12 rank and file, under command of Captain Mace. Total—1 field officer, 9 captains, 13 subalterns, 2 staff, 23 serjeants, 8 drummers, 489 rank and file.

at twelve midnight, on Monday, the 18th instant, and proceeded south.

The force arrived at St. George's redoubt, Tataraimaka, at about 2 A.M., on the 19th. I left there a force of 100 men of the 57th and Militia, under command of Captain Schomberg, 57th Regiment, to occupy the redoubt until my return; I then proceeded across the Kaitakari River, crossed the Kaihihi about 5 A.M., and reached the bank of the Hangatahua River about 7 A.M., without seeing any signs of natives, except a small fire at some distance inland to our left. I encamped at Waretea, about a quarter of a mile on this side of the Hangatahua.

At about 9 A.M. I took a party consisting of 50 of the 57th, and 150 Bushrangers and Militia, and crossing the Hangatahua proceeded inland to the Puketawa pah, which I found deserted. We burned this pah, and the whares in it, and after destroying some cultivations returned to the encampment. On our return Captain Mace with the mounted men succeeded in capturing and driving in eleven horses, the property of the rebels. At 7 A.M. the next morning (Wednesday, the 20th), I removed the whole of my force about a mile up the coast, I have again halted, and leaving the baggage carts, &c., &c., with one gun and 150 men, under the command of Captain Stewart, 57th Regiment, moved the remainder of my force up a cross road towards the ranges, where I had been informed I should find considerable native cultivation.

About a mile up this road we came within sight of the Paiakamahoe pah across the river to our right. I fired a few shells into it, but the place having every appearance of being unoccupied, proceeded onwards towards the bush. As we approached it we perceived from a mound on our left a small pah,* situated in a clearing within the bush. I advanced very carefully, throwing out flank guards to my right and left, and almost immediately on entering the bush, a rather heavy fire was opened upon my party from their front, and one of my men (Private Dowling, 57th) was wounded.

The fire was sharply returned by the rifles of my men, and the Armstrong gun, which completely silenced that of the enemy, but not having any knowledge of the locality or of the number and position of the rebels, I did not deem it advisable to push further into the bush, but contented myself with destroying a quantity of cultivations and burning some whares, and then returned to the place where I had left my main body, having destroyed Paiakamahoe pah and burned a considerable number of whares which were in it; on our way back the mounted men brought in six more horses on this day, making a total of seventeen taken from the rebels.

Immediately on joining the main body I marched the whole back to Tatarainaka redoubt, which I reached about four P.M., and remained there the night.

The next morning (Thursday, 21st), at about half-past eight, A.M., I paraded the whole of my force and moved to Hauranga, where I left the carts, under a guard of 100 men, with one gun, and took the remainder up to Ahu Ahu, as I had seen from the south that there was a clearing high upon the ranges, which had not yet been explored.

After posting strong picquets round the bottom of the spur, I sent Major Atkinson, with 100 bushrangers, supported by parties of 57th and militia, to the top of the range where they found cultivations and several whares which they destroyed.

On their way up they found in a swamp the mutilated remains of Private Gallagher, of the Taranaki Militia, who was reported missing on the 6th instant, after the attack on Captain Lloyd's party; after destroying several more small cultivations, I returned with the whole of my force, reaching Oakura about half-past four P.M.

In concluding my report I must beg to mention how materially I was aided in carrying out your orders by the steadiness and ready obedience of the whole of the force under my command, as shown in the margin; I would also observe that Lieutenant Clarke, 57th Regiment, Deputy-Assist-

SIR, New Plymouth, May 1, 1864.

I HAVE the honour to report, for the information of the Lieutenant-General Commanding, that, at an early hour yesterday morning, I received information by telegraph from Sentry-hill, that the rebel Maoris were in unusual numbers, dancing their war dance within a short distance of the redoubt, and shortly after another telegram informed me that they had, with a courage proved by their severe loss, advanced boldly to the attack, I immediately ordered reinforcements from town,* and proceeded towards the scene of action, on reaching Mahohitahi I was informed by Major Butler, commanding the outposts, that the attack had been most successfully repulsed by Captain Short, and by the small garrison at Sentry-hill† under his command, and that although Major Butler with a reinforcement from the regular and militia forces at Mahohitahi and one 12-pounder howitzer had immediately proceeded to Captain Short's assistance, the rebels were already driven back, and it only remained for Major Butler to give directions to collect the killed and wounded (34) thirty-four of whom scattered at different distances, and one within fifteen yards of the redoubt were brought in, and nearly double that number, as is stated, were wounded and carried away by their comrades.

On reaching Sentry Hill I had much satisfaction in witnessing the result of this most successful engagement, in which we had only one man wounded‡; and as I had taken on the friendly chief "Mahu," and one or two other influential natives, I was able, through Mr. Parris, to identify several of the principal chiefs killed, among whom, by the enclosed report, the Lieutenant-General will be glad to observe the names of "Parengi Kingi," "Manaihi," and some of the most troublesome and warlike of the neighbouring tribes.

On Captain Short hearing the Maoris in the adjoining bush, he without the slightest noise, or evidence of his watchfulness, fell in the men of his detachment at their appointed stations, and made them sit down on the Banquette, with strict orders not to show themselves, or to fire until they received the order to do so. The Maoris (reported by the prisoners as over 300 in number) advanced to within 300 yards of the redoubt, they hesitated, evidently startled by the unexpected silence, then approached a little nearer, and some more bold than the others, rushed forward. Captain Short called upon his men to stand to their arms, and a succession of volleys, with an occasional shell from the small 4½-inch cohorns, by which the redoubt was defended, stopt the Maoris in their advance, they hesitated, broke, and fled, leaving, as above stated, upwards of thirty killed, and several wounded, while numbers were seen to fall and to be dragged off by their comrades.

Major Butler, with the reinforcement from Mahohitahi, followed up the pursuit, but the bush offered facilities of escape, and the weakness of his force prevented his attempting to gain any further advantage.

It was too late to do so upon the arrival of the 200 men from town (nine miles distant), and I then determined that it would be better to await the reinforcements for which we have so anxiously looked, than to attack an enemy whose strength was unknown, and who had reached the cover of his entrenched position at Manutahi. In this decision Majors Butler and Atkinson cordially coincided, although I fear it must have greatly disappointed the eager but small force under my command, who, flushed with the morning's success, would have doubtless driven the enemy from both the positions at Mataitawa and Manutahi, but I should have been obliged immediately to withdraw, as I have neither men to garrison, nor transport to supply, any new outposts.

I need scarcely take the liberty of recommending to the Lieutenant-General's favourable consideration the excellent conduct of Captain Short, commanding the detachment, and of Lieutenant Waller, 57th Regiment (in the absence of Ensign Down, on temporary leave), the only two officers in the redoubt.

Captain Short the Lieutenant-General will kindly recollect recommending for the Victoria Cross, for his gallant conduct in storming the enemy's position on the Katikara River, on the 4th June, 1863, and Lieutenant W. Waller was brought to the Lieutenant-General's notice in May last, when having fallen alone into a native ambuscade, after his horse was shot, he beat off seven natives, and with his revolver wounded Hori, who was afterwards taken prisoner and tried.

To the conduct of the above officers, and to the steadiness and strict attention to orders (as reported to me by Captain Short) of the non-commissioned officers and men in the redoubt, I must attribute the excellent result of this engagement, which has entirely restored the confidence for a moment shaken by the unfortunate disaster at Ahuahu; our vengeance has been at least five fold, and to show how we appreciate the desperate gallantry of the natives I sent to offer to return to them their dead, but they had not courage to send for them, and they were buried near the redoubt.

Major Butler and the officers and men placed in support at Mahohitahi promptly responded to Captain Short's application for assistance, but too late to render any effectual aid.

The men of the 57th Regiment, under Captains Stewart and Schomberg, and the Taranaki Rifle Volunteers and Militia, under Major Atkinson, from town, were equally zealous in marching rapidly to the scene of action.

Assistant-Surgeons Tomlinson (Staff) and Spence (T.M.) were in attendance on the wounded prisoners, two of whom died shortly after removal to Mahohitahi, the other Hoere Piriri (brother of Manaihi, the murderer of Mr. Ford and other settlers), a native of this town, is now in hospital, severely wounded in three places. He awaits, with the other prisoners now in gaol, the orders of Government as to their disposal.

I have, &c.,

P.S.—I have, since writing the above report, ascertained that although only 300 rebel natives advanced to the attack of the redoubt, they had a support of 300 in the adjoining bush, on the Waiongana River, and that about 200 were left at Manutahi, ready as a reserve, in case we should have attacked them, as they expected, on the open ground, and driven them back upon their entrenched works.

Valuable and Important Mining Estate and Farm.

TO be sold by auction (pursuant to a Decree of the High Court of Chancery, made in a cause Lloyd v. Pearson, and with the approbation of the Master of the Rolls), by Mr. Joseph Cooksey, at the Hen and Chickens Hotel, Birmingham, on Thursday, the 22nd day of September, 1864, at two o'clock precisely.

A very desirable leasehold mining property, known as the Leyceat Colliery, situate in the parish of Madeley, Staffordshire, comprising the ungoten mines of coal, ironstone, and limestone, in upwards of 4000 acres, and a farm of about 70 acres (part of the estates of Lord Crewe), together with the colliery plant and stock.

It is held under an agreement dated the 12th day of March, 1857, made between Lord Crewe of the one part, and Daniel Pearson of the other part, for a lease for the term of twenty-one years, commencing from the 1st day of April, 1857, at a fixed mine rent for the colliery of £600 per annum, and a surface rent for any land not held as therein mentioned, required for colliery or other purposes, of £3 or £2 per acre per annum, according to state of cultivation.

And at the rent of £72 3s. per annum for the farm.

The property lies about three miles from the Madeley station of the London and North-Western Railway, and four miles from the Newcastle-under-Lyne station of the North Staffordshire Railway. A branch railway from the London and North-Western Railway, at a point near the Madeley station, has been constructed for the use of the colliery, through part of the estate.

South Hants.

TO be sold by auction, pursuant to two Orders of the High Court of Chancery, made in a cause Taylor v. Fadwick, with the approbation of his Honor the Vice-Chancellor Sir John Stuart, in twenty-eight lots, by Mr. C. B. Smith, at Garraway's Coffee House, Change-alley, Cornhill, on Friday, the 23rd day of September, 1864, at one o'clock in the afternoon precisely.

An extensive freehold estate, consisting of the Manor of Hayling, with its valuable manorial rights, extending over nearly the whole island; the manor house, with its appendages; the rectory, and the perpetual right of presentation to the vicarage of North and South Hayling; the Manor Farm, Sinah Farm, and several smaller holdings, containing altogether about 1200 acres of productive land, and extensive woodlands, besides about 1100 acres of mudlands; a tide-mill, and several private residences on the beach, on the south shore of the island, opposite the Isle of Wight, of which a pleasing view is commanded, as well as of Spithead; two coach-houses and stables, dwelling-houses, butcher's shop and premises, and four freehold ground rents. Hayling is situate near Havant, two hours' journey from London by the Direct Portsmouth line. It is approached on this side by a bridge and causeway. A railway from the Havant station of the Brighton and Direct Portsmouth Railways along the western side of the island to its southern extremity, is now constructing, which will furnish rapid communication with London and all places on the south coast. The harbour of Langstone extends along the whole western coast; and a passage boat belonging to the ferry, an appendage of the manor, conveys passengers and carriages to Cumberland Fort, from whence it is a pleasing drive of about three miles to Portsmouth and the King's Rooms at Southsea. On the south beach is a bathing-house, and the fine sands extend five miles along the south coast, adjoining which there are extensive building sites. An Act has been recently passed for the construction of docks and other works at the south-west extremity of the island. From its natural beauty and salubrity, Hayling is likely to become a favourite watering place; and the entire estate, which, with a trifling exception, is tithe-free, with the land-tax redeemed, offers to capitalists a valuable investment, with the prospect of great improvement.

Printed particulars may be had of Messrs. Gray and Mounsey, No. 9, Staple-inn; of Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffes, No. 1, Bedford-row; of Messrs. Newman, Lyon, and Newman, No. 7, King's-bench-walk, Temple, London; of Henry Dobinson, Esq., Carlisle; of C. J. Longcroft, Esq., Havant; and of Messrs. C. B.
