FRIDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1864.

War Office, October 7, 1864.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Surgeon William Alexander Mackinnon, of the 57th Regiment, to be an Ordinary Member of the Military Division of the Third-Class, or Companions of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

Downing Street, October 6, 1864.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint John Maclean, Esq., C.B., now Lieutenant-Governor of the territories of British Kaffraria, to be Lieutenant-Governor of the Colony of Natal.

Her Majesty has also been pleased to appoint Wellwood Maxwell Anderson, Esq., to be Agent-General of Immigration for the Island of Jamaica.

Foreign Office, October 5, 1864.

THE following Returns have been received by Earl Russell, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Pekin:—

REPORT on the Foreign Trade at the Port of Canton, for the year 1863.

The Returns annexed to this report are as follows:—

- No. 1. A Return of the British Shipping at the Port of Canton, in the year 1863, showing the direct trade in British vessels to and from Great Britain and British colonies.
- No. 2. A Return of the British and Foreign Shipping at the Port of Canton during the year 1863.
- No. 3. A Return of the Foreign (other than British) Shipping at the Port of Canton during the year 1863.
- No. 4. A Synoptical Return of the Import Trade at Canton during the year 1863, and contrasting the same with the value of the Imports in 1862.
- No. 5. A Synoptical Return of the Export Trade at Canton during the year 1863, and contrasting the same with the value of the Exports in 1862.

These Returns, like those of the preceding year, have been compiled from the Custom-house Reports, and in so far may be considered as correct; but they must not be assumed as representing the actual trade of this portion of the Chinese Empire, from the fact that a very large business in foreign manufactures and opium is done at the British colony of Hong Kong, and the goods and produce there purchased are conveyed chiefly down the coast, and being landed at the numerous towns, or carried up the rivers, find their way into the interior in all directions. To obtain, therefore, a true estimate of the amount and value of foreign trade with this part of China, would require Returns from all these various places, which is simply impossible. The position may be shewn in very few words. On a coast line of nearly seven hundred miles, studded with bays, harbours, cities, and towns, and with rivers, such as that called the West River, penetrating far into the interior, there is one treaty port, Canton, and an open and free mart, the colony of Hong Kong. It is but reasonable, therefore, that if Chinese traders can purchase goods at Hong Kong, and land them on the coast, they will not pass them through the foreign Custom-house at Canton, but will ship them direct to their destination. The same may be said with regard to exports from these places. Hence it follows that no estimate can be formed of the foreign trade in this part of China from the published Canton Custom-house Returns, for they represent a local trade only.

A comparison of the Returns of the past with the preceding year, will show a decrease generally, in the trade of the port, but by no means to the extent anticipated. To begin with—

Imports.

The total value in sterling for the year 1863, is estimated at two millions two hundred and eighty-one thousand three hundred and fifty-four pounds (£2,281,354), against two millions four hundred and twelve thousand five hundred and fifteen pounds (£2,412,515), in 1862, showing a decrease amounting to the sum of one hundred and thirty-one thousand one hundred and sixty-one pounds (£131,161), in the past year's trade.

As regards the causes of this decrease, the falling off must be attributed as much to failure in supply as to failure in demand, the rise in piece goods owing to the American supply of raw cotton ceasing, having brought the foreign into competition with the native manufactures; and as the Chinese prefer the latter, from being heavier and of more lasting qualities, they abandon the former the moment its price places it beyond the denomination of being a cheap article for clothing.

Compare, for instance, the imports of cotton manufactured goods for the two preceding years:—

and a large deficiency in plain goods will appear, and particularly in the article of Bombay raw cotton, whilst in fancy goods the difference is rather in favour of 1863. This latter may be accounted for in the heavy stocks on the manufacturer's hands, which rendered their going off beneficial to the holders, and therefore the prices were not affected in a ratio proportionate to that of the plain manufactures.

But take the imports of woollen manufactures—

	1862.	1863.

Woollen and cotton } mixtures }	8,769	5,769

It will be seen that the balance is in favour generally for 1863, and this arises from the fact that wool has not been subjected to the fluctuations of raw cotton, or deficiency in supply, and therefore, if anything, there has been an improvement, and not a deficiency, in this branch of the import trade.

The result of these comparisons tends to show that the decrease in the value of the import trade of 1863—namely, one hundred and thirty-one thousand one hundred and sixty-one pounds sterling (£131,161)—is owing as much to foreign as to native influences; and that, under such circumstances, the past two or three years will afford no criterion of the capabilities of Canton as a mart for foreign manufactures.

The import of Opium in 1863, as compared with 1862, differs in amount but little. The temptation to smuggle so valuable an article, and the facilities the coast affords for that purpose are so great, that in all probability what passes through the Canton Custom-house is for local consumption only, and so it will be until the Chinese authorities establish a preventive service.

Exports.

The value of this trade may be taken at three millions eight hundred and sixty-two thousand and thirty-nine pounds (£3,862,039), against four millions and sixty thousand seven hundred and forty-six pounds sterling (£4,060,746) in 1862, showing a decrease of one hundred and ninety-eight thousand seven hundred and seven pounds sterling (£198,707). This may chiefly be attributed to the short supplies of teas, the export in 1863 being less than in 1862, by at least seven millions four hundred and eighteen thousand eight hundred and ninety pounds; but less though it be, it is more than was anticipated, the opinion being, at the close of last season, that little or no teas would come again to Canton. But notwithstanding this, not only did they come down, but the tea-men held out for high rates, and generally obtained them.

As regards silk, the export of the two years, 1862–63, is much on a par.

Of a trade stationary as this is there is little to be said. Hong Kong is doubtless a formidable rival to Canton, because, as before observed, it is a free port, and a depôt for the neighbouring coast of China, but Hong Kong produces nothing and consumes nothing, and it is to the interior provinces we must look for both. At present the disordered state of the Empire paralyzes its capabilities, and the necessity of raising a revenue to meet its war expenditure presses heavily on the people; but it is to be hoped, and indeed there is every prospect of an improvement in this state of affairs, and with internal peace will come a development of those mercantile energies which are now only in abeyance and not extinguished. For seeing that the province of Kwan-tung alone comprises an area of seventy-nine thousand four hundred and fifty-six square miles, with a population of above twenty millions; the adjoining one of Kwang-si, seventy-eight thousand two hundred and fifty square miles, with a population of above eight millions; Szechum, bordering on the latter, one hundred and sixty-six thousand eight hundred square miles, and a population of twenty-two millions; and Hu-nan, immediately adjoining that of Kwang-tung, seventy-four thousand three hundred and twenty square miles, with a population of nineteen millions, showing a total of three hundred and ninety-eight thousand eight hundred and twenty-six square miles, and a population of sixty-nine millions of inhabitants, it may be safely assumed that our trade with these alone, independent of the other portions of this vast Empire, is as yet undeveloped, and their capabilities of production and consumption unknown. It is true that the ports of Hankow and Foo Chow have withdrawn from that of Canton the chief trade in teas, and on the other hand foreign events have swept away from it the great trade in raw cotton which formerly existed; but Canton has seen its worst, and what it is this year it will probably be next, neither better nor worse, unless peace in the West and peace in the Empire follow, and then indeed there is a hopeful future before it, rich in promises and certain in results.

REPORT by Mr. Vice-Consul Hughes, on the Trade of Kewkeang during 1863.

SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

The year opened with favourable prospects for river steamers of a desirable class, there being few such vessels running at the time, and cargo offering freely. The rate of freight to Shanghai during January and February, ranged from 7 taels to 9 taels per ton of 40 cubic feet, but during March, in consequence of lighter shipments, it fell to 4 taels. After that period steamers, of large carrying capacity, were continually arriving from America, and these additions to the tonnage on the river, led to farther reduction in rates. Accordingly, during the closing months of the year, the rate varied from 2 taels to 2½ taels and 3 taels per ton. The preference for vessels built after the model of American river steamers is still manifested. The peculiar fitness of these boats for river work, to which reference was made in my report of last year, becomes daily more apparent. So far as steamers are concerned, the English flag is now represented by only two vessels, one of which, the "Fusi-yama," was built in Shanghai, but had her boilers, machinery, and fittings sent from America; the other, the "Express," was built in Glasgow, partly at least after the American model. The tonnage of British and American vessels which arrived at Kewkeang during the year 1863, amounted to 348,347 tons. There were also a few native-built boats under the French flag.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

Exports.

TEA.—The quantity of black tea exported during the year 1863, considerably exceeds that of the previous year. This increase does not arise from the growth of larger crops, but from the diversion from Hankow of teas grown in districts more easily accessible from this port. When the river was first opened to trade, the teas were sent to Hankow, because a greater number of foreign buyers were at that place, and in consequence it presented a larger market to the native dealers. The increase of resident merchants in Kewkeang has in turn attracted the teas to their natural port. It may reasonably be expected, that the Ningchow teas, for instance, will hereafter almost invariably find their way to Kewkeang, as also some of the tea which, though grown in the province of Hoopak (Oopak), is produced in districts easily accessible from this port.

The crop of green tea is smaller this season (1863-64) than last. This result is attributable in part to unfavourable weather during the packing season, but mainly to inroads of rebels from cities around Nanking into the Hwng-chow (Fy-chow) tea districts, which led to the destruction of a large quantity of leaf, and, in some instances, to the abandonment of extensive tracts covered with trees, until it was too late to pack the tea for this season.

Compared with the tea season, June 1862, to June 1863, it is expected that the season ended June 1864, will show a considerable falling off, and this expectation has tended to raise prices; on the other hand, the export of the year, ending 31st of December, 1863, exceeds that of 1862.

The following statement has been supplied by the gentleman in charge of the Chinese Customs at this Port:—

Last year (1862) there were no foreigners engaged in the collection of the duties, and it was difficult to obtain accurate returns; the approximate estimate given in my report for 1862, I have since had reason to believe, erred on the side of excess; so that the increase on the export of tea in 1863, as compared with 1862, may be safely set down as not less than five millions of pounds.

Of the three kinds of tea enumerated, the black and green teas are intended for export to foreign countries from Shanghai, while the leaf is chiefly used for native consumption.

Paper continued to be largely exported during 1863.

From the proximity of this place to the pottery districts, chinaware will always be one of its staple articles of trade. Hemp, tobacco, tallow, and dye colours are among the miscellaneous products frequently shipped to Shanghai. As the Customs' Returns, when completed, will furnish accurate statistics, merely approximate estimates need not now be given.

Imports.

Upwards of 2000 chests of Malwa opium were imported during 1863; transactions in cotton goods have been very unsatisfactory, in consequence of the extreme range of prices demanded by foreign merchants. In the beginning of the year, grey shirtings were quoted at 3 taels, they are now at 3½ per piece. But, in fact, the country surrounding Kewkeang, is still too poor to be a good market for foreign goods; it is only just commencing to recover from the devastations of the rebels, and of the Imperialist braves who infested this neighbourhood a few years since.

During the first six months of the year (1st January to 30th June), the imports of grey shirtings were:—

In English vessels	34,004 pieces.
In American "	34,882 "
		68,886

During the last six months none, it is believed, were imported in British vessels, and not much more than 13,000 pieces in American vessels. The falling off in the import of grey shirtings and other cotton manufactures, during the last half of the year, is attributable, in part, to the better position of the Shanghai market, and partly also to the greater demand which always exists for these goods during the spring and summer.

The import trade in coast and Japanese products, such as sugar, seaweed, &c., is also increasing.

Copper cash continued to be largely imported ; the amount imported in 1863, in vessels under foreign flags, cannot have fallen far short of 2,500 tons weight.

CURRENCY, &c.

The tael weight of silver is the standard of value in commercial transactions here as elsewhere in China ; dollars are not in favour. At present $95\frac{4}{10}$ Kewkeang taels are equal to 100 Shanghai taels ; the taels used in the purchase of land is $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. more than that used in ordinary commerce, and the Haekuan or Government tael, in which duties are paid, is of still higher value ; 100 Haekuan taels are equal to $106\frac{3}{10}$ Kewkeang taels.

There is no bank yet established in Kewkeang, and, as almost all the trade is with Shanghai, the rates of exchange upon England cannot be given. On an average, the Haekuan tael may, perhaps, be estimated at 7s., and the Kewkeang tael at, say 6s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

The weights and measures do not materially differ from those which are in use in other parts of China.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The total amount of duties received during 1863, at the Chinese Custom-house, under foreign management, is—

Quarter ending	Export.	Import.	Coast Trade.	Tonnage.
	H. Taels.	H. Taels.	H. Taels.	H. Taels.
31st March	135,149·414	162·233	66,159·264	262·1

	579,327·962	162·233	286,404·078	2852·9 amounting in all to taels 868,747·173, which, at 7s. per tael, equal £304,061 10s. 3d.

The import duties, it may be remarked, are usually paid in Shanghai.

The general business of the port has greatly increased during the year. Ten British and three American firms have branch establishments here, and in addition there are three British local firms. Several large houses, godowns, &c., have been built within the British concession. The Chinese city and suburbs have also undergone a great change ; numbers of handsome shops have been erected, and the Canton storekeepers, of whom several have established themselves, are doing some good to trade by popularising the taste for articles of foreign manufacture.

The chief obstacles to the development of foreign commerce offered by the Chinese authorities are their failure to carry out the Tariff Regulation respecting trade in the interior under transit passes, and their unwillingness to open the Poyang Lake.

With regard to the first of these obstacles, it is found that the authorities of the province of Hoopoh, do not recognise passes issued in this province ; consequently a merchant has to pay all local dues as if his produce belonged to a native, and applications have in vain been made to the Chinese authorities for a refund of the amount paid in excess of legal transit duty. Worse than this is the case in this province, and in that of Ganhwuy, where the passes are recognised, but before the tea is allowed to be put into the junks to be conveyed to Kewkeang from the tea districts, a tax of taels $1\frac{2}{10}$ per picul in some cases, in others of taels $1\frac{4}{10}$ is levied ostensibly upon the native dealer, but really on the foreign merchant who has also to pay the transit duty of taels $1\frac{2}{10}$ per picul on the arrival of the tea at Kewkeang. The treaty transit passes are now practically abolished, as the merchant finds it his interest to have the tea brought from the place of production as Chinese property, or to give up trade in the interior altogether, and purchase produce at the ports of trade. Practically this state of things works well enough at present, but the objections to it are that it leaves merchants to some extent at the mercy of the mandarins, and does away with the protection provided by treaty against extortionate charges in the interior upon goods belonging to British subjects.

Endeavours have been made by private individuals to induce the Chinese authorities to consent to the employment of steamers on the Poyang Lake, but without effect. There is no doubt but that the measure would be attended with the most beneficial results. The shallowness of the greater portion of the lake, and the narrowness of the navigable channels which traverse it, will always prevent the employment of any but very small steamers, which, though adapted for the short trip between places on the lake and Kewkeang, could not be employed with profit for direct communication with Shanghai. At present boats, laden with tea, often remain windbound for weeks in the lake ; if permission were given by the authorities, these boats could be towed to Kewkeang in a few hours. Rapid and direct communication with the green tea districts, and the potteries near the south-east border of the lake, and with Wooching, would confer great benefits upon both the native and foreign trader. Woo-ching is the most important mart for foreign manufactures in this province. It is also the spot at which the Ning-chow teas from one direction, and the Hokow teas from another are, when on their way to Kewkeang, transhipped into junks fitted by their size to cross the lake with safety.

The steam navigation of the lake has been noticed as a subject which well deserves attention in connection with the trade of Kewkeang. The project which must sooner or later be carried into effect, seems to be the most natural and feasible means of increasing the prosperity of this port.

CONTRACTS FOR SALT PORK.

Contract Department, Admiralty,
Somerset House, September 3, 1864.

THE Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland do hereby give notice, that on Monday, the 10th October next, at half past one o'clock, they will be ready to treat with such persons as may be willing to contract for supplying and delivering into Her Majesty's Victualling Stores at the undermentioned Ports, the following quantities of all of the cure of the present season, viz. :—

SALT PORK,

NAVY PORK.

	Tierces.	Barrels.
Deptford	2,900	... 2,900.
Haulbowline	2,900	.. 2,900.

The Pork to be delivered into the respective Stores as follows; viz. : one-third of each quantity for each place by the 28th day of January, 1865; another third thereof by the 11th day of March, 1865; and the remainder thereof by the 29th day of April, 1865; or any greater portion, or the whole, at any earlier period, if preferred by the party tendering, and to be paid for by bills at three days after date, which will be sent to parties as usual.

Their Lordships reserve to themselves the power, when the tenders are opened, of contracting either for the whole, or for such part thereof only as they may deem fit, or for a greater quantity, or of not contracting for any; and also an unlimited power of selection.

Every tender must specify the name of the person by whom the meat is intended to be cured, the brand of the meat, and the place of cure.

Tenders for pork, of the cure of the United States of America, will not be admitted.

Persons tendering for more than one Port must give a separate tender for each Port.

Persons tendering must give a reference to a banker for each surety proposed; and they are desired to take special notice that the use of wooden hoops is abolished, and that iron hoops only will be required for the casks in accordance with the conditions of the contract.

A form of the tender may be obtained, and the conditions of the contract, to which particular attention is called, may be seen in the Lobby of the Department of the Comptroller of Victualling, Somerset House, at the Victualling Yards at Gosport and Plymouth, or by applying to the Agent Victualler at Haulbowline; or to the Collectors of Her Majesty's Customs at Bristol, Limerick, Belfast, Waterford, and Newry; or to the Secretary to the Postmaster-General at Dublin; or to the Commander conducting the Packet Service at Liverpool; or to the Resident Agent for Transports at Leith.

No tender will be admitted for a less quantity than 100 tierces, or 100 barrels.

No tender will be received after half past one o'clock on the day of treaty, nor any noticed, unless made on the printed form provided for the purpose; but it will not be necessary that the party tendering, or an agent appointed by him, should attend, as the result of the offer received from each person will be communicated to him and to his proposed sureties in writing.

Every tender must be addressed to the Secretary of the Admiralty, and bear in the left-hand corner of the envelope the words "Tender for Salt Pork," and must also be delivered at the Department of the Comptroller of Victualling, Somerset House.
