

Majesty's reign, chapter one hundred and seven, continued by divers subsequent Acts, and lastly by an Act of the last session of Parliament, the Lords of Her Majesty's Council did among other things order that from and after the third day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, it should not be lawful for any person to remove cattle or other animals from any port or place in England and Wales to any port or place in Scotland :

And whereas by sundry subsequent Orders the Lords of the Council have authorized the removal of cattle and other animals from the counties of Northumberland and Cumberland into Scotland, subject to certain provisions therein set forth :

And whereas it is expedient that the like authority should be given for the removal of cattle and other animals from the county of Westmoreland into Scotland :

Now, therefore, the Lords of Her Majesty's Privy Council do hereby order that from and after the sixth day of February, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, notwithstanding anything in the said first mentioned Order of the 31st day of August last provided, it shall be lawful for any person to move cattle and other animals from the county of Westmoreland into Scotland, provided that a licence for moving such animals be obtained in the form and otherwise in accordance with the provisions contained in the Order made by the said Lords, bearing date the 8th day of August last, which apply to the licence therein termed the Store Stock Licence, and provided also that the Local Authority of the county in Scotland, into which such animals are proposed to be removed, shall give authority, or issue some regulation for the movement of animals from the county of Westmoreland into it, and the same shall be duly observed.

This Order shall be construed in like manner as the Order issued by the Lords of the said Council under the Acts aforesaid, bearing date the 24th day of March last, and shall be published by the Local Authority of the county of Westmoreland in some public newspaper circulating in the same county.

Every regulation to be made by every such Local Authority in Scotland shall be published in like manner as other regulations issued by Local Authorities in Scotland have been required to be published by the Lords of the said Council.
