Considering that it is of the highest importance to put an end forthwith to the state of uncertainty in which the commerce of Great Britain and France is situated as to the system to which the commercial and maritime relations of the two countries will be subjected at the expiration of the existing Treaties;

Agree to prolong for a further period of three months, that is to say, from the 8th of November next to the 8th of February, 1882, the Treaties of Commerce and Navigation in force between Great Britain and France;
