War Office, November 6, 1882.

A DESPATCH, of which the following is a copy, has been received by the Secretary of State for War from the Commander-in-Chief of the Expeditionary Force in Egypt:—

SIR, Cairo, October 8, 1882.

MAJOR-GENERAL GRAHAM, commanding 2nd Infantry Brigade, reports to me that he has only just seen for the first time a copy of Major-General Drury-Lowe's report on the part taken by the Cavalry in the action at Kassassin on the 28th August last, and he wishes me to correct an error into which General Lowe had inadvertently but, under the circumstances, very naturally, fallen through the unsatisfactory manner in which General Graham's message, ordering the Cavalry to co-operate on the enemy's left, was delivered to General Lowe.

The message was a verbal one, and its substance is given in the enclosed copy of a letter from Lieutenant Pirie, 4th Dragoon Guards, who was the officer sent with it.

General Graham states, in the most emphatic manner, that no message was sent by him about being "only just able to hold his own," an expression for which Lieutenant Pirie is solely responsible. That officer, it would seem, mixed up his own views on the position with the real message he was sent to deliver.

I have merely to add, that the position at Kassassin was never in any serious danger, General Graham having always been strong enough to drive back any partial attacks of the enemy, and there being, within easily supporting distance, enough troops to defeat any serious attempt that might be made upon the position.

In the event of any serious attack, it was the duty of General Drury-Lowe to support General Graham, as he did upon the occasion in question, with all the Cavalry, Infantry, and Artillery at Maxamah, which is only four and three-quarter miles from Kassassin, and the officer commanding the Division to which General Graham belonged, General Willis, was at Mahuta, only ten miles from Kassassin, with the Guards Brigade, the West Kent, and Royal Rifles, three Batteries of Artillery, and about four squadrons of Cavalry.

General Graham, far from being in the position that Lieutenant Pirie represented to General Lowe, assumed the offensive towards the evening, and advanced along the railway driving the enemy before him for some two or three miles before the cavalry had charged at all.

The charge made by General Lowe was skillfully conducted and most gallantly carried out, but, in justice to General Graham, it is essential you should know that the enemy were retreating at the time when the charge took place, a fact which General Lowe is well aware of and reported to me the next day.

I have, &c.,
G. J. WOLSELEY, General,
Commander-in-Chief.

SIR, Cairo, October 8, 1882.

IN accordance with your request I beg to state that on August 28th at Kassassin, I was sent by you to General Drury-Lowe with the following message:—"To take the cavalry round by our right under cover of the hill, and attack the left flank of the enemy's skirmishers."

On reaching General Drury-Lowe, I was questioned at once as to what you were doing and what was going on at the front, and in reply I said you were just able to hold your own, or words to that effect, but as these were merely my words, I cannot accurately remember the exact words I made use of, not attaching any importance to them. I then delivered the above message from you, which was the only one I delivered from you, and which I gave word for word.

I have, &c.,
D. VERNON PIRIE,
Lieutenant, 4th Dragoon Guards.
To Major-General Graham, V.C., C.B.
