THE following is a translation of the Quarantine Rules adopted by the Egyptian Board of Health for arrivals from Arabian ports of the Red Sea during the pilgrimage season, and which were referred to in the notice from this Department of the 28th ultimo (published in the Gazette of the 31st ultimo), as having been received through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

No copy of the model card of residence for pilgrims, mentioned in these rules, has been received.

Translation.

EGYPTIAN MARITIME AND QUARANTINE BOARD OF HEALTH.

REGULATIONS relative to arrivals from Arabian ports of the Red Sea during the Pilgrimage season of 1882-3.

PART I.

ARRIVALS WITH FOUL BILLS IN RESPECT OF CHOLERA.

ART. 1. Every ship arriving from a port of the Hedjaz, or from any other port of the Arabian coast of the Red Sea, with a foul bill of health on account of cholera, and having on board pilgrims or the like destined for Suez or any Mediterranean port, must go to El-Wisch in order to undergo the regulation quarantine.

There passengers, baggage, and susceptible merchandise will be disembarked, and these, as well as effects in use, and the ship will be disinfected.

Ships, after disinfection, will, in case of need, be authorised to go to the port of Gabban, and to stay there until the expiration of their quarantine.

ART. 2. The duration of quarantine for the pilgrims referred to in the preceding article shall be for fifteen full days, to be counted from the day of the last known case of cholera in the quarantine section of El-Wisch, provided that the sections afford sufficient guarantees as to isolation.

When once the quarantine has been undergone the pilgrims will be sent to Tor, where they must undergo a further quarantine for five days, accompanied by disinfection of effects and very susceptible merchandise (1st category), as well as of the vessel. Finally, foreign pilgrims must embark on the ship which brought them to Tor, and pass the canal in quarantine, after undergoing an interrogatory and a favourable medical visit at Suez.

The rules of the sections shall be observed there as at El-Wisch.

If a choleraic case should occur in one of the sections, the pilgrims in that section shall undergo a quarantine of fifteen days.

Egyptian pilgrims, after leaving Tor, must land at Moses' Wells to undergo a quarantine of observation for three days and a medical visit, before being admitted to free pratique.

The ships which carry these pilgrims will be subjected to the same measures as the latter, without being permitted to leave them in order to undertake new voyages.

If during the voyage from Tor to Suez any of these ships should have a suspicious case on board, the ship will be sent back to Tor.

ART. 3. The agents of navigation companies and masters are informed that only Egyptian pilgrims will, after finishing their quarantine at the lazarets of El-Wisch and Tor, be authorised to finally leave the ship at Moses' Wells with a view of going to their homes.

Only those pilgrims who are bearers of a card of residence issued by an Egyptian authority, and in conformity with the model hereto annexed, will be recognised as Egyptians or residents in Egypt. Specimens of this card will be deposited with the consular and sanitary authorities at Djed-dah and Yambo, where agents and masters of ships can examine them.

Pilgrims who are not Egyptians, such as Turks, Russians, Persians, Tunisians, Algerians, Moors, &c., cannot, after leaving El-Wisch and Tor, be landed at an Egyptian port.

In consequence navigation agents and masters are informed that the trans-shipment of pilgrims who are foreigners to Egypt, whether at Tor, Suez, Port Said, or Alexandria is forbidden.

Ships which have on board pilgrims belonging to the nationalities specified in the foregoing paragraph will share the conditions imposed on such pilgrims, and will not be received in any Egyptian port of the Mediterranean.

ART. 4. Ships with foul bills of health on account of cholera, coming from the Hedjaz or any other port of the Arabian coast of the Red Sea, without having embarked pilgrims or the like, and not having had any suspicious case on board during their voyage, are authorised to undergo the ten days' quarantine at Tor. There the effects, susceptible merchandize of both categories, and the ship will be disinfected. Such vessels may then pass the Canal in quarantine if they are destined for a Mediterranean port not in Egypt. If their destination is in Egypt, they must undergo three days' quarantine of observation at Moses' Wells, and they will not be admitted to free pratique except after a favourable medical visit.

It is understood that if these ships have had suspicious cases during their voyage the quarantine to be undergone by them at Tor will be for fifteen days.

In any instance where a suspicious case may show itself on board during the voyage between Tor and Suez, the ship will be sent back to Tor there to undergo the quarantine referred to in the preceding paragraph.

Caravans composed of Egyptian pilgrims must, before entering Egypt, undergo a rigorous quarantine of fifteen days at El-Wisch. They will then be sent to Moses' Wells, there to undergo a quarantine of observation of five days, after which they will not be admitted to free pratique except after a favourable medical visit and disinfection of effects.

Caravans composed of foreign pilgrims on their way home by land will be subjected to the same measures as caravans of Egyptians, and must be accompanied by sanitary guards as far as the limits of the desert.

PART II.

ARRIVALS WITH FOUL BILLS IN RESPECT OF PLAGUE.

ART. 5. The provisions contained in the preceding Articles 1, 2, 3, and 4 are applicable to ships arriving from the Hedjaz, or any other port of the Red Sea, with foul bills of health on account of plague.

PART III.

ARRIVALS WITH CLEAN BILLS.

ART. 6. (1.) Throughout the whole season of the return of pilgrims, ships coming from the Hedjaz, or any other port of the Arabian coast of the Red Sea, with clean bills of health and having pilgrims on board, must go to Tor, there to undergo an observation of 48 hours after complete disembarkation of pilgrims.

(2.) The pilgrims only will be disembarked at the quarantine camp.

(3.) After having undergone this observation of 48 hours, the ships will be admitted to free pratique at Suez, if the medical visit is favourable.

(4.) Nevertheless only pilgrims who are Egyptian or resident in Egypt, and bearing a card of residence, will be allowed to land at Suez.

(5.) With respect to other pilgrims of foreign nationality the regulation set forth in paragraph 3 of Article 3 will be followed.

(6.) The trans-shipment of pilgrims is strictly forbidden at all Egyptian ports.

(7.) Ships coming from the Hedjaz, or a port of the Arabian coast of the Red Sea, with clean bills of health, not having on board pilgrims or the like, and not having had any suspicious case during the voyage, will be admitted to free pratique at Suez after a favourable medical visit.

ART. 7. Ships leaving the Hedjaz with clean bills of health, and having on board pilgrims whose destination is a port of the African coast of the Red Sea, are authorized to go to Souakim, there to undergo the 48 hours' observation, accompanied by disembarkation of passengers at the quarantine camp.

ART. 8. Caravans and pilgrims coming by land will be subjected to an observation of 48 hours at Mcses' Wells and to a medical visit.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

Sanitary officers of the Hedjaz are requested to give a copy of these regulations to every master on his arrival, and to endorse upon the bill of health that this has been done.

All previous provisions which are contrary to the present regulations are and remain revoked.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

(No. 230.)—SPAIN—NORTH-WEST COAST.

Precautions necessary in passing Cape Finisterre.

THE Committee of Lloyd's having drawn attention, through the Board of Trade, to the large number of vessels that during the last few years have been wrecked or otherwise lost in the neighbourhood of Cape Finisterre, it is deemed desirable in the interests of seamen to re-publish the following information bearing on the navigation of that part of the coast of Spain.

The sailing directions for the west coasts of France, Spain and Portugal, 3rd edition, 1881, published by the Admiralty, state at page 4 (as was also stated in the editions of 1867 and 1873).

"The easterly current from the North Atlantic strikes the land near Cape Ortegal in Spain, and then appears to divide into two branches; the northern (Rennell current) flowing eastward along the coast of Spain, then north along the west coast of France. The southern branch turns gradually to the south-east and southward along the coast of Portugal until having passed Cape St. Vincent, when it runs eastward to the Strait of Gibraltar. It must not however be presumed that the current along the west coast of Spain and Portugal always sets to the southward, for during westerly winds it sets strong towards the land, and immediately after the continuance of southerly gales or strong breezes this current will probably be found setting to the northward."

"The mariner will perceive that caution is necessary in crossing the Bay of Biscay, and that due allowance should be made both for the outset and indraft, but especially the latter, when standing to the southward during thick weather for a position westward of Cape Finisterre."

It is also stated in the same sailing directions at page 224—"The coast between Capes Ortegal and Finisterre is dangerous to approach at night, especially in the winter season, or in thick and foggy weather, which is frequent here, for not only does a powerful current at times set towards the land from the north-west, but the streams of flood and ebb often draw vessels out of their computed position."

As some of the recorded wrecks in the neighbourhood of Cape Finisterre may have arisen from the effects of the indraft, or set towards the land, as above described; the attention of mariners is again drawn to the necessity of caution and of a vigilant look-out when approaching the parallel of the Cape.

Mariners are also cautioned when approaching Cape Finisterre, especially in vessels from ports of the United Kingdom, to lose no favourable opportunity of ascertaining the errors of the navigating compass:—one of the unsuspected causes of vessels being found, in thick weather, in dangerous proximity to the land, being doubtless due to the disregard of these necessary observations.

[According to a statement furnished by Lloyd's, the following are the losses in the neighbourhood of Cape Finisterre, from the year 1877 (inclusive) to July, 1882, namely:—Wrecks, 15; Losses by Collision, 7; Foundered, 8; Abandoned, 6.]

By command of their Lordships,

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

(No. 231.)—AFRICA.—NORTH-EAST COAST.

Precautions Necessary in Rounding Cape Guardafui (Ras Asir) from the Southward.

THE Committee of Lloyd's having drawn attention, through the Board of Trade, to the large number of wrecks which of late years have taken place in the neighbourhood of Cape Guardafui; it has been considered desirable to re-publish, for the guidance of mariners, the following information bearing on the navigation of that locality.

It is to be observed that the wrecks in the neighbourhood of Cape Guardafui have occurred chiefly during the period of the south-west monsoon (April to September). In this season the weather, when approaching the African Coast, is stormy and accompanied by a heavy sea; the currents are strong, and the land is generally obscured by a thick haze.

Vessels bound from the eastward through the Gulf of Aden, during the south-west monsoon, approach Cape Guardafui from the southward: as the route usually adopted lies between that cape and the Island of Sokotra. In inculcating due caution for vessels using this route, the directions, published by the Admiralty in the "Gulf of Aden Pilot," second edition, 1882, state at page 10 (as is also stated in the African Pilot, part 3, 3rd edition, 1878.)

"As many large and valuable vessels have from time to time been wrecked with loss of life on the coast southward of Cape Guardafui (Ras Asir), when bound round this headland from the south-eastward; seamen should use the utmost caution not only in making the land, but also in verifying the vessel's position by soundings, more especially at night or during the south-west monsoon, when the weather is hazy."

"As soundings extend from 10 to 12 miles from the coast, the deep-sea lead should frequently be used, and the vessel's course altered to N. by E. or N. by E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E., or if necessary more to the eastward, immediately soundings are struck, or the land sighted in dark or hazy weather. By steering to the northward as above, and by not standing into less than 35 fathoms water, the vessel's safety will be ensured, and as the water rapidly deepens northward of the parallel of the cape, the 100 fathoms line of soundings being only  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles from it, there will be difficulty as to the time when the course should be again altered to W.N.W. During day a gradual change will be probably be seen in the colour of water from blue to dark green. Attention should also be paid to the alteration in the direction of the swell caused by the promontory of Ras Hafún." [Ras Hafún is about 80 miles south of Cape Guardafui.]

At page 13 it is stated:—"Caution is requisite in making the land north of Ras Hafún in the night. The water gets smoother, and the swell alters its direction to the eastward of south, when the meridian of that cape is passed."

And at page 42 (as also in the 1st edition, 1863):—"Care is necessary in making the cape (Guardafui) for the Gulf of Aden, during the south-west monsoon; the current setting up the coast strong to the northward and close round the cape to the westward; but at a short distance (off shore) the current continues its course to the northward and eastward, whereby a vessel unless close in with the land, would be set out of her course and probably lose her passage;" or, in other words be set eastwards towards Sokotra.

The valuable guidance afforded in the directions for approaching Cape Guardafui from the southward, above-quoted, and the precautions to be observed—derived, as those directions are, from experience extending over many years—cannot be too earnestly recommended to seamen.

[From the end of the year 1876 to July, 1882, there were, according to a statement furnished by Lloyd's, 7 vessels wrecked, and 8 vessels stranded in the neighbourhood of Cape Guardafui.]

By command of their Lordships,

Fredk. J. Evans, Hydrographer.
