

Lieutenant Herbert M. Heathcote, late Her Majesty's ship "Dryad."

Lieutenant Archibald J. Pocklington, late Her Majesty's ship "Dryad."

For a short time before the arrival of Captain Andoe from Trinkitat, the disembarkation at Suakin was in charge of Commander Rolfe, who was as efficient and thorough in discharge of those duties as when commanding the Naval Brigade.

The arrangements for condensing and storage of water were under charge of Mr. Crook, Chief Engineer of Her Majesty's ship "Euryalus," and to the skill and care shown by that officer I attribute the fact that the supply at the base was always ample for all requirements.

Mr. Crook was associated with a military officer, generally Major Wood, R.E., and was assisted by a naval officer, at Trinkitat, by Lieutenant Broadley, Her Majesty's ship "Junna," and at Suakin, by Lieutenant and Commander Bigge, Her Majesty's ship "Decoy."

I have, &c.,

G. GRAHAM, Major-General.
Commanding Expeditionary Force.
