NOTICE TO MARINERS.

(No. 113 of the year 1888.)

GERMAN COASTS.

Uniform System of Buoyage and Beacons.

THE German Government has given notice, that the following uniform system of buoyage will be established in marking the channels and shoals on the German Coasts, from 1st April, 1889 :—

The seaward entrances of channels, not marked by light-vessels, beacons, or moles, have beacon buoys, of the same colour as the channel buoys moored in such a position that the nearest channel buoys may be plainly seen from them.

The term Starboard Hand denotes that side of a channel which lies on the right hand of the mariner when entering from seaward; and the term Port Hand, the left hand under the same circumstances.

Where a channel connects two parts of a sea, or two sheets of water separated by banks, the Starboard Hand in that side which lies on the right hand when entering from the westward. The term, from the westward is taken to include the whole of the western semicircle, from north (true), inclusive, to South; and the Port Hand that on the left.

Buoys surmounted by a topmark, bell buoys, gas buoys, or automatic signal buoys, are called Beacon.

Buoys showing a mast above water are called Spar, and may be of any shape.

Buoys showing the pointed top of a cone above water are called Conical.

Buoys showing a flat top above water are called Can.

Buoys showing a domed top above water are called Spherical.

Buoys showing a portion of a cylinder, with the arched side uppermost above water are called Barrel.

Beacons consisting of a group of piles are called "d'Alben."

Beacons consisting of single stakes or perches, and driven into the ground, are called perches; these may be surmounted by branches or brooms.

Beacons consisting of young trees, with branches, or branches only, are called "Pricken."

Letters or numbers on channel buoys or beacons are painted white, and begin with the buoy or beacon furthest seaward; but channels of considerable length may be divided into sections, each with a separate series of letters or numbers.

Starboard Hand buoys are spar buoys, painted red; or where several channels are near each other, or the water is not deep enough for spar buoys, can buoys, painted red, may be used.

Port Hand buoys are conical buoys, painted black.

Starboard Hand beacons are beacons with spars, painted red, or perches; Port Hand beacons are beacons without spars, painted black, or "Pricken."

Mid-channel buoys, which may be passed on either side, are spherical buoys, painted red and black, in stripes.

The extremes of shoals extending from the shore, or of reefs in channels, are marked by beacons or beacon buoys, painted red and black, in stripes.

The extremes of middle grounds are marked by beacons or beacon buoys, painted red and black, in stripes; which, when next the seaward entrance of a channel, are surmounted by a cross.

Shoals lying seaward of channels are marked by spar buoys, beacon buoys, or beacons. Should a shoal be so small that it can be marked by a single buoy or beacon, and passed on any side, such buoy or beacon is painted black and white in stripes, and surmounted by a drum.

Buoys and beacons, marking the edges of shoals seaward of channels, are painted white, and surmounted by two vertical equilateral triangles, arranged as follows: when on the northern edge of the shoal, the points of both triangles upwards; on the southern edge, points downwards; eastern edge, point of upper triangle upwards, point of lower triangle downwards; western edge, points towards each other.

The name of the shoal, either in full or abbreviated, is painted on the buoys and beacons marking it, in black letters; and buoys and beacons on the edges of shoals have the letters N., S., E., or W. painted on them in black letters, to correspond with the side of the shoal on which they are situated.

Wreck buoys are either can, conical, or barrel buoys, painted green, with the word Wrack (wreck) painted on them in white letters. The distinguishing marks on wreck buoys are similar to those used for marking shoals seaward of channels.

Buoys marking the position of telegraph cables, are spherical buoys, painted green, with the word Telegraf or T painted on them in white letters.

Buoys marking the boundaries of quarantine stations are either can, conical, or barrel buoys, painted yellow.

Buoys marking target, mine, or torpedo grounds are barrel buoys, painted yellow, and surmounted by a small red flag.

Buoys and beacons for mooring purposes, or to define the boundaries of a roadstead, or used for surveying purposes, are so constructed in shape, colour, and top-marks, as to prevent their being mistaken for any other buoys or beacons in the vicinity.

By command of their Lordships,

W. J. L. Wharton, Hydrographer.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

(No. 115 of the year 1888.)

RED SEA.

Position of Avocet Rock.

WITH reference to Notice to Mariners, No. 190 of 1887, on reported sunken rocks northward of Jebel Zukur Island :—

Telegraphic information has been received from Lieutenant and Commander T. F. Pullen, H.M. Surveying-vessel "Stork," that he has found a small coral patch, with a least depth of 15 feet, situated in lat. $14^{\circ} 22' 8''$ N., long. $42^{\circ} 41' 32''$ E.

This is undoubtedly the danger on which the steam vessels "Avocet" and "Teddington" struck during last year. It lies midway between the two best positions, which, from conflicting evidence, could be assigned to the respective vessels when they struck. The depths around the rock are 28 to 30 fathoms.

The "Stork's" search is the fourth that has been made by H.M. Ships, before this small danger has been re-di-covered.

Vessels passing down the Red Sea should keep to the westward of this rock, and should remember that irregular lateral currents sometimes set across the sea; and if when on the homeward voyage they pass eastward of Abu Ail, care should be taken to steer to the westward after rounding that island, until Jebel Zukur summit bears about S.S.E. $\frac{1}{2}$ E.

There is little doubt that the loss of the "Avocet" was due to one of the lateral currents above-mentioned, as not only was the steam vessel "St. Oswald," in company with the "Avocet," also to the eastward of the correct track, but other vessels passed on both sides of the two vessels while stopped to save the crew of the "Avocet."

[The bearing is magnetic. Variation 4° Westerly in 1888.]
