Board of Trade (Marine Department),
Whitehall Gardens, July 24, 1889.
HER Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to confer the decoration of the "Albert Medal of the Second Class" on JOHN DINNEEN, Chief Mate of the steamship "Albatross," of London.

The following is an account of the services in respect of which the decoration has been conferred:—

On the 4th November, 1888, the schooner "Isabella Hall," of Barrow, stranded on the Tongue Sand, and the crew, having lost their boat in a heavy sea, were obliged to take to the rigging and wait for assistance.

Next morning two boats were despatched from two different steamers to their relief, but could not get near the wreck, owing to the heaviness of the sea, and the shipwrecked crew were in danger of losing their lives, when the steamship "Albatross," of London, which was passing up channel, despatched a boat, manned by the Chief Mate, JOHN DINNEEN, and four seamen, who, notwithstanding strong warnings from the other boats of the danger of the attempt, rowed close to the wreck, and after nearly an hour's struggle, threw a line on board and rescued one of the crew.

He was scarcely got into the boat when a heavy sea nearly swamped her, and washed DINNEEN and three seamen out of her. They, however, managed to regain the boat, and, baling her out, proceeded with their task, and finally succeeded in rescuing the remainder of the shipwrecked men.

The service throughout was attended with very great risk and difficulty, and owed its success chiefly to the energy and determination of DINNEEN, and his constant encouragement of his men.

(3.) Cape Fear River Entrance—Alterations and Additions in Lighting.

Also, that on or about 15th July, 1889, the following alterations and additions would be made in the lighting of Cape Fear River Entrance:—

1. Oak Island Leading Lights.—The front light has been moved to the westward, and kept in line with the back light, bearing about N.N.E., now leads directly over the position of the bell buoy at Cape Fear River Entrance.

2. Cape Fear Leading Lights.—This line of direction is no longer available, the front light being discontinued.

3. New Channel Leading Lights.—These lights are established on Smith Island, to guide through the channel recently dredged across Cape Fear River Bar:—

The lights are fixed white lights, shown from lanterns on posts about 800 yards apart, and when in line bear N.E. by E. $\frac{1}{4}$ E. approximately. Their directing line intersects Oak Island Leading Lights in line at the bell buoy at Cape Fear River Entrance. The front light is elevated 9 feet above high water, and the back light 15 feet.

The front light of the New Channel Leading Lights is so situated that, kept in line with Cape Fear Light (as a back light) bearing S.S.E. $\frac{1}{4}$ E., it leads from its intersection with Smith Island leading lights in line to an anchorage near Smithville (Southport).

4. Smith Island Leading Lights.—The back light is altered from a fixed white light to a fixed red light.

DIRECTIONS.—The bell buoy at Cape Fear River Entrance is moored at the intersection of Oak Island Leading Lights (two fixed red) in line with the New Channel Leading Lights (two fixed white) in line, Cross the bar with the last-named
