"Gaceta de Madrid," July 9, 1892.

As the Asiatic cholera morbus is spreading in some regions of Southern Russia, and advancing along the west of the Caspian Sea, and thereby threatening the coast of the Black Sea, our Sanitary Administration is obliged to see that the ships coming from the abovementioned localities strictly adhere to the Regulations directed by them.

These Regulations, according to the Order of July 7, 1883, are the following :—

First. "In case of epidemical existence of the Asiatic cholera morbus, in the port of origin or in any other, at which the vessel touched during her journey, by virtue of the 35th Article of the Sanitary Law of 1855, reformed by that of May, 1866, she shall be sent in her infectious state to a lazaretto, and there undergo ten days of quarantine, provided that there has been no death on board during the passage; but if the latter happens to be the case, all goods included in the Article 41 of the same Law, i.e., clothes worn by the crew and passengers, raw hides, skins, furs, feathers, wool, silk, cotton, cloth, papers, and living animals shall be landed and purified, and all vegetable and animal substances in a state of decomposition shall be burned or thrown into the sea. The remainder of the cargo shall be ventilated, the port holes opened, and the necessary disinfectants placed in them."

Secondly. "Vessels coming from neighbouring or intermediate countries which are in open communication with those where the epidemic has been officially declared to exist, shall, in obedience to the Article 36 of the above-mentioned Law, undergo three days' inspection, during which time attention shall be paid to the sanitary means stated in the third paragraph of the Royal Order of June 5 and in the Circular of November 30, 1872, that is to say, baths and cleanliness of the crew and the ventilation of the vessel, a cleaning and disinfecting of the sink, and chlorical fumigations in the hold and cabins."

Thirdly. "A death on board or unsatisfactory state of health of the crew or passengers, and a doubtful result to the visit of inspection, shall necessitate a convocation of the Medical Commission of the Local Sanitary Union, who shall give forth their decision according to that which is stated in the Royal Order of October 4, 1872."

The outbreak was caused by the opening of a drain, and is confined to the quarter of the town where the drain is situated. A military cordon has been drawn round the town, and also between Tyre and Sidon, and between Sidon and Beirut, besides the imposition of ten days' quarantine on arrivals by sea from the coast between Jaffa and Beyrout, not inclusive.
