

attempt to prevent him and then without divesting himself of any of his clothing immediately dived after the man from a height of 25 feet above the water, and only about 30 feet forward of the propellers of the vessel.

Mr. ROBINSON reached the man and did his utmost to rescue him, but his efforts were met with violent resistance, and in the end the man succeeded in drowning himself.

Mr. ROBINSON ran great risk of being drawn under the propellers, and when picked up was in a very exhausted condition.
