(Translation.)

Precautions to be taken at the Sanitary Station at Doel in the cases of all vessels (including those having clean bills of health) coming from infected ports, whether they have touched at intermediate ports or not.

Indirect Arrivals.

1. Disinfection of all latrines and urinals, and such other parts of the ship as may be deemed necessary.

2. The bilge water shall be pumped out, and a fresh supply of drinking water taken on board.

3. The Sanitary Officials shall inspect the list of passengers and the crew list and examine every person on board.

If it shall be found that any of the persons who left the port of origin with the vessel are no longer on board, satisfactory proof shall be demanded that they did not leave the ship on account of any epidemic or contagious disease.

4. The ship's manifest shall be submitted to the Sanitary Inspector, in order that he may ascertain that there are no goods on board of a suspicious nature or of which the introduction is forbidden.

In order to facilitate the carrying out of these measures, vessels can, if necessary, be detained at the Sanitary Station during one tide.

Any vessels having on board no merchandise of a suspicious or prohibited nature, can be exempted from detention, if a duly signed copy of her manifest has, five days before arrival, been forwarded to the President of the Sanitary Commission, and if they are able to produce a certificate (in duplicate) of the Sanitary Authorities of a port of call, free of any contagious disease, stating:—

a. That measures for disinfection, similar to those described in provisions 1 and 2, have been carried into effect.

(b.) That no person on board has suffered from any contagious disease during the whole voyage, if the duration thereof shall have been at least twelve days between the last infected port visited and the port at which the certificate is granted.

If the above conditions shall have been fulfilled the Master must slacken speed at Doel to permit the quarantine boat to come alongside. The duplicate bills of health shall be delivered to the Sanitary Inspector; one of these shall be retained by him, and the other, after having been dated and stamped, will be returned to the Master, who shall deliver it to the Customs Authorities on his arrival in the port.

The greater number of countries having taken effective quarantine measures with regard to all goods coming from the plague-stricken districts of India, vessels arriving at Antwerp from healthy ports need undergo no special sanitary formalities.

At the same time certificates of origin must be produced for any suspicious or prohibited goods arriving even from a healthy port.

Alterations in Uniform System of Buoyage.

THE Danish Government has given notice that the undermentioned alterations in their Uniform System of Buoyage will be made when the sea marks are placed in the spring of 1897:—

1. a. Main Channels.—In the main channels the shapes and colours of the buoys, as well as their topmarks, indicate the side of the fairway on which they are placed.

b. The starboard side of the channel is marked by conical buoys, painted red; when topmarks are used they are either one, two, or three up-turned brooms upon a red staff.

c. The port side of the Channel is marked by can buoys, painted white; when topmarks are used they are either one, two, or three down-turned brooms upon a white staff.

d. Middle grounds, or dangers that may be passed on either side, are marked by conical buoys, painted red and white in stripes; when a topmark is used it is a ball, striped red and white, on a staff, also striped red and white.

Similar buoys may be used as distinguishing marks.

e. Light buoys and whistle buoys, as regards colour and topmarks; and bell buoys, with regard to shape; are in accordance with the system given above.

2. a. Small Channels.—In the smaller channels the colour and topmark of the buoy or perch indicates the side of the channel on which it is placed.

b. The starboard side of the channel is marked by buoys or perches, painted red, and surmounted by one or two brooms.

c. The port side of the channel is marked by buoys or perches, painted white, and surmounted by one or two straw wisps.

3. a. APPLICATION OF SYSTEM.—The starboard side of a fairway is that which is on the starboard side of a vessel when entering; and the port side that which is on the port side.

b. In the Skagerrak, the Kattegat, the Sound, the Great Belt, and the Little Belt, a vessel is said to be entering the channel when proceeding from the North Sea towards a Danish harbour or to the Baltic.

c. In land-locked fiords and inlets to a port or roadstead, a vessel is said to be entering when coming from seaward.

d. Liim fiord, Smaalands Fairway, and the fairway southward of Fyen are considered as each two land-locked fiords; the meeting points, respectively, being Logstør, Masnedo, and Svendborg-Marstal.

4. WINTER BUOYAGE.—In the winter large bell buoys and can buoys are replaced by smaller buoys of similar shape, topmark, and colour, and a few buoys are withdrawn.

When ice compels the withdrawal of light buoys or whistle buoys, they are replaced by spar buoys or conical buoys.

5. WRECKS.—A wreck-marking vessel or buoy is painted green and carries as a topmark (if used) a green flag on a green staff.

A wreck-marking vessel also shows three balls upon a yard; two, placed vertically, from the yard-arm on the side on which vessels may pass; and one from the other yard-arm.
