THE French Government has given notice that, on 1st January, 1898, the undermentioned alterations would be made in the night tidal signals shown from the extremity of Dunkerque West Moie:—

The fixed red and fixed green lights, previously shown when the height of the tide was less than $6\frac{1}{2}$ feet above the level of low water, ordinary springs, have been discontinued; and the signals are now given above the level of low water equinoctial springs tides, or that, to which the soundings on the charts are reduced, as follows:—

The tidal signals consist of a white light, showing one occultation while the tide is rising, and two occultations when it is falling; the height being indicated by means of coloured flashes, each red flash representing nearly $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet and each green flash nearly 10 inches.
