CAUTION.—Communications received on the subject of the height of Zi Hill showing that its elevation has been used as a means of obtaining the distance of ships from the coast, Mariners are hereby warned of the danger of employing this method of obtaining position unless both the height and the position of the object selected have been carefully determined in the course of an accurate survey. This may sometimes be judged by the appearance of the Chart and the date of the survey, but in the majority of cases heights on Admiralty Charts can only be regarded as approximate.
