For the purposes of the Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 to 1890, and all Provisional Orders and Licences made and issued thereunder, the Board of Trade approve of the pattern and construction of the meter for the measurement of electrical quantity, when supplied on the constant potential continuous current system, hereinafter described, viz.:—the meter, No. 9910, deposited at the Board of Trade, on the 15th day of April, 1902, by Chamberlain and Hookham Limited, of 4, New Bartholomew-street, Birmingham, and sealed by the Board of Trade and known as the Hookham Meter.

The Board of Trade further approve of the following manner of fixing meters of this description, and of connecting them with the service lines:—

The meter is to be fixed by screws to a horizontal support.

In connecting the meter with the service lines one service line is to be cut and the ends bared of insulation at the cut for about one inch, the insulation being cut straight across. The outside of the insulating material is to be made to fit closely the hole through which the line is passed to the terminal, indiarubber tape or other insulating material being wound on to the requisite thickness if necessary.

The connection is to be made so that the current is passed through the meter in the right direction, viz.:—from the terminal marked + to the terminal marked —; the conductors are to be tightly clamped in their terminals: the insulation between each conductor and the case is to be good; and the ends of the conductors are not to project beyond the tops of the terminal boxes.

Signed by order of the Board of Trade this 22nd day of May, 1902.
