FRIDAY, MARCH 1, 1907.

Whitchall, February 28, 1907.

The following Address was presented to His Majesty on the occasion of Their Majesties' visit to the City on Wednesday, the 27th instant, for the purpose of opening the new Central Criminal Court building:—

To Their Most Excellent Majesties The King and Queen.

May it please Your Majesties.

We, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled, desire to offer to Your Majesties the expression of our devotion to Your Persons and Throne, and our gratitude for Your gracious condescension in attending here to-day to declare this building open as Your Majesty's Central Court for the administration of criminal justice.

This court was established by Act of Parliament, passed in the fourth year of the reign of His Majesty King William IV, and was referred to on the 15th August, 1834, by His Majesty in His gracious speech from the Throne on the prorogation of Parliament in the following terms: "The establishment of a Central Criminal Court for the trial of offences in the metropolis and its neighbourhood will I trust improve the administration of justice within the populous sphere of its jurisdiction, and afford a useful example to every other part of the Kingdom."

The area over which this court has jurisdiction includes the City of London, the whole of the counties of London and Middlesex, and a very considerable part of the counties of Essex, Kent, and Surrey.

The "populous sphere," referred to in His Majesty's gracious speech, which in 1834 had a population of only 1,800,000, to-day has a population of considerably over 6,000,000, and the average number of prisoners tried in this court each year exceeds 1,100.

A court house for the trial of prisoners has existed in the City of London from very early times, and the name of the Lord Mayor for the time being has always been included in the commission of oyer and terminer by virtue of a Charter of King Edward III, bearing date the 6th March, 1327.

In 1785 a new sessions house was built by the Corporation of London and was subsequently several times enlarged; it however proved quite inadequate to meet the demands of the present day, and on the 20th December, 1902, the first stone of this building (which stands upon the site of the ancient prison of Newgate) was laid.

The present building has been erected at the sole cost of Your City of London, without assistance from Imperial funds or the neighbouring counties, and will provide for courts for the trial of prisoners, and arrangements have been made for the reception of the Lord Mayor, Your Majesty's Judges, the Aldermen, Sheriffs, and others connected with the administration of criminal justice.

We trust that this building, whilst well adapted for the transaction of legal business, also possesses architectural features at once dignified and beautiful, which will make it an ornament to the metropolis of Your Empire, and a fitting home for the first Criminal Court of Justice of Your Majesty's Dominions.

In conclusion we devoutly pray that all concerned in the discharge of judicial duties within these walls may be so guided by Divine Providence that they may administer justice with firmness and impartiality, ever mindful of the paramount duty which devolves upon them to at all times temper justice with mercy.

That Your Majesties may long be spared secure in the affection of Your people to preside over the destinies of this mighty Empire is the fervent prayer of Your loyal and devoted City of London.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following gracious Answer :—

It is a source of great gratification to The Queen and Myself to preside at the opening of the new Central Criminal Court. We thank you sincerely for your dutiful address of welcome, and We cordially congratulate you, My Lord Mayor, and, through you, the City of London, on the admirable manner in which this great work has been carried out. The building, which We shall presently examine with the greatest interest, is not only of handsome exterior, but is, I am confident, admirably fitted in every way for the purpose for which it is designed.

The great increase in the population of the metropolitan area which has taken place in the last half century rendered the old buildings far too confined for the proper performance of the duties for which they were at one time adequate, and this noble edifice, erected by the City of London entirely at its own expense, will, I am sure, amply fulfil its high purpose by giving convenience and dignity to the administration of justice, in the interests not only of the inhabitants of its immediate district but of the vast urban population that has accumulated in the adjacent counties.

The old buildings which have now been replaced, were, however, of high historical interest, for they witnessed during the century of their existence a change in the administration of criminal justice far greater than has taken place in any preceding century. The barbarous penal code which was deemed necessary a hundred years ago has gradually been replaced in the progress towards a higher civilisation by laws breathing a more humane spirit and aiming at a nobler purpose. It is well that crime should be punished, but it is better that the criminal should be reformed. Under the present laws, the mercy shown to first offenders is, I am well assured, often the means of re-shaping their lives, and many persons, especially children and young offenders, who, under the old system might have become hardened criminals, are now saved from a life of crime and converted into useful citizens. Still more remains to be accomplished in the direction of reclaiming those who have fallen into crime, and I look with confidence to those who will administer justice in this building to have continual regard to the hope of reform in the criminal, and to maintain and strengthen in their new home those noble traditions which have gathered round the high position they occupy.

I am well assured that the independence and learning of the Judges, supported by the integrity and ability of the other members of the profession of the law, will prove in the future, as they have in the past, the safeguard of order, right conduct, and true humanity.

We sincerely join in your prayer that God's guidance, without which we can do nothing, may be vouchsafed to all those whom duty calls to administer justice in this Court.

Whitehall, February 28, 1907.

The KING was pleased on the 27th instant, on the occasion of Their Majesties' visit to the City, for the purpose of opening the new Central Criminal Court building, to confer the honour of Knighthood upon the Common Serjeant, Frederick Albert Bosanquet, Esq., K.C., and Charles Willie Mathews, Esq., K.C.

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, the 1st day of March, 1907.

Quita Sueno Bank—Shoal Reported Westward of.

Information has been received from Messrs. J. F. Wilson and Co., that Mr. Dockeray, Master of the Company's steamship Aureola, reports that, on 20th October, 1906, his vessel, when passing to the westward of Quita Sueno Bank, struck on a shoal, on which depths of from 17 to 22 feet were obtained. The position of the vessel when aground was ascertained by astronomical observations to be lat. 14° 25' N., long. 81° 22' W.; and the northern end of Quita Sueno Bank was said to bear N. 67° E., and the nearest rocks in sight S. 37° E.

NOTE.—The above position would make the distance from the northern end of Quita Sueno Bank about 14 miles. It would therefore seem probable that this shoal is situated nearer to that bank than the observations place it, or that there is another bank unsurveyed west of Quita Sueno.
