

several times obtained a signal in reply from the imprisoned man. Hughes was then so exhausted that he had to return after fixing a guide-line for future use.

After a rest of $3\frac{1}{2}$ hours Hughes and Hearne again descended, the descent being the fifth that Hughes had made that day. He succeeded in reaching Varischetti, shook hands with him, and supplied him with an electric lamp, food, and other necessaries. Next day he again made a visit, Hearne as before staying at the angle at the foot of the ore-pass; and daily visits were repeated until the 28th March, when the water had been lowered sufficiently to make it just possible for a man to wade along the No. 10 level from the ore-pass with his head out of the water. Diver Hughes then went in twice without his diving dress and talked to Varischetti, and then made a third trip and brought him out, carrying him portion of the way, the entombed man's strength having failed him.
