FRIDAY, JULY 23, 1909.

Whitehall, July 20, 1909.

The following Address was presented to The King on the arrival of Their Majesties at Liverpool on Wednesday, the 7th July, en route for Birmingham, for the opening of the new buildings of the University of Birmingham:—

Address of the Liverpool City Council.

To Their Most Excellent Majesties The King and Queen.

May it please Your Majesty,

We, Your Majesties' loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of Liverpool humbly desire to offer to Your Majesties the assurance of our devotion to Your Majesty's person and of our pleasure in welcoming Your Majesties to the City of Liverpool. We desire to express our gratitude for the presence of Your Majesty and of Her Majesty the Queen at the Review of the Territorial Forces of West Lancashire, and we rejoice to think that Your Majesty has thus honoured a Force which the Citizens of Liverpool have done all in their power to assist. We humbly pray that Your Majesty may be long spared to rule over us, and in company with Her Majesty the Queen, enjoy for many years the love and devotion of a loyal people.

Given under the Corporate Common Seal of the City of Liverpool, the seventh day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nine.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following gracious Answer:—

"I thank you on behalf of the Queen and Myself for your loyal and dutiful Address of Welcome.

"I remember well My last visit to you, which was for the purpose of laying the foundation stone of the new Cathedral, which witnesses to the care of your Citizens for the religious needs of the community. With religion patriotism goes hand in hand, and it is not unfitting that My second visit to Liverpool should be for the purpose of reviewing the Territorial Forces of West Lancashire.

"I trust that, under the Providence of God, there may never be occasion for the Forces which I have reviewed to-day to be called into action; but readiness for self-defence is the strongest of the safeguards of peace, and I rejoice to know that the Citizens of Liverpool have done their part in the work of providing for the defence of My country. I am sure that you will spare no efforts in the future for this object."

On the arrival of Their Majesties at Birmingham the following Addresses were presented:—

Address of the Birmingham City Council.

To Their Most Excellent Majesties The King and Queen.

May it please Your Majesties,

We, Your Majesties' loyal and devoted subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of Your City of Birmingham, in Council assembled, humbly approach Your Royal presence to offer a sincere and hearty welcome on the occasion of this—the first—visit of Your Majesties to our City since the coronation of Your Majesties as King and Queen of this Realm.

We recollect with grateful satisfaction the previous occasions upon which Your Majesties have honoured Birmingham, and are deeply conscious of the encouragement which has been given from time to time to the progress of our City by the gracious recognition which Your Majesties and other Members of Your Royal House have been pleased to accord to many of our institutions.

The development of the facilities for education has engaged the anxious care of Your Majesties' loyal subjects in Birmingham, and in offering hearty thanks for so great a mark of Your Royal favour, we regard it as a fortunate circumstance that in visiting Birmingham to declare open the new buildings erected for our University Your Majesties again manifest interest in our City and graciously further and sanction the most important work yet undertaken by us.

The welfare of Your subjects has been Your Majesties' constant care, and we shall ever gratefully remember the successful efforts which Your Majesties have made so sedulously for the preservation of international peace. Immunity from strife affords opportunity for higher culture and stimulates a desire for learning which will be fostered and encouraged by the University in our City.

We offer to Your Majesty, our beloved Sovereign, and to Your Royal Consort, heartfelt thanks for the gracious condescension of this visit to our City, and, renewing our assurances of loyalty and duty, we humbly pray that secure in the love and affection of Your people Your Majesties may long be spared to reign over this mighty Empire.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following gracious Answer:—

"I thank you cordially on behalf of the Queen and Myself for the loyal and dutiful Address of Welcome which you have handed Me from the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of Birmingham.

"When I look at this vast city, the chief centre of the industrial life of the Midlands, I naturally think of the great men to whose industry and efforts the astonishing expansion of your prosperity is mainly due—some of whom have written their names for ever in the history of their country. Many of them, I am glad to say, are with us to-day, and are taking part in your loyal welcome.

"It is noteworthy that many of the distinguished men who have taken a leading part in the municipal life of your city are the men who, by their business activities, have been instrumental in raising Birmingham to its present position in the industrial world; and when I consider the immense progress which has taken place during the past hundred years in the prosperity and welfare of all classes, I can well appreciate the pride with which Birmingham is regarded by its citizens. Great schemes, such as that for providing your city with pure water, have been undertaken in the past, and have been brought to a successful issue; but none is worthier of support or more far-reaching in its scope than the establishment and extension of the great University in which you have taken so important a part.

"Fortunate is the City which can obtain for its government the spontaneous services of so many able and conscientious citizens.

"Birmingham is the home of the best traditions of municipal life, and I am well assured that these traditions will be upheld in the future as they have been in the past.

"You may be well assured that the prosperity and welfare of your City will always be an object of My most earnest good wishes."

Address of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce.

To Their Most Gracious Majesties King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra.

May it please Your Majesties.

We, the Members of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, being representative of all branches of commerce and industry in this City, humbly desire to offer to Your Majesties a loyal and dutiful welcome on the occasion of Your Majesties' gracious visit to open the new buildings of the University of Birmingham.

We humbly offer to Your Majesties an expression of the affectionate loyalty and attachment of the business community of this populous district to Your Majesties' Throne and Persons.

We avail ourselves of this opportunity of acknowledging with the deepest gratitude that the eminently wise, tactful, and unremitting labours of His Majesty in the cause of Amity and Goodwill among Nations, have earned the heartfelt thanks of the mercantile and manufacturing classes whose vital interests, owing to the magnitude of their business transactions in all parts of the world, are favourably affected by the friendly relations existing between the United Kingdom and Foreign Countries.

We recall with pleasure the previous occasions on which Your Majesties, before ascending the Throne, visited the City of Birmingham, and we gratefully recognise that Your Majesties' present visit is one more proof of the thoughtful interest Your Majesties have always evinced in institutions which contribute to the moral and material welfare of Your people.

The foundation of the University which Your Majesties have graciously consented to honour by Your presence to-day, has been heartily welcomed and supported by the mercantile and manufacturing classes. They realise that the wealth and prosperity of this great centre of production, and the expansion of its varied activities, are intimately bound up with the advancement and spread of higher education, not only in the Faculties of Arts, Science, and Medicine, but also in the Faculty of Commerce, which is specially directed to the training of our future leaders of commerce and captains of industry.

We shall ever pray that Your Majesties' beneficent Rule may be long and glorious, bringing added lustre to Your reign, and securing a continuance of peace and happiness for Your Majesties' loyal and devoted subjects.

Signed on behalf of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, this seventh day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nine.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following gracious Answer:—

"The Queen and I are highly gratified at the cordial Address of Welcome which you have handed to Us, and at the loyal good wishes it contains.

"Famous throughout the world for its great industries, your City has for many years sent out its staple manufactures to eager purchasers in every quarter of the globe. The mighty factories for which the district is celebrated have provided livelihood for many thousands, and their products have everywhere enhanced the high reputation of the British manufacturer and workman. Machinery bearing the name of your City is always recognized as the best of its kind, and the industry and enterprise which are the basis of the greatness of the Empire are nowhere better exemplified than in Birmingham.

"I am deeply gratified that My efforts in the cause of peace have aided in the continuance of this prosperous and striking development.

"I am glad to learn that the commercial community have been faithful and generous supporters of the University. I feel assured that your expectations of advantages to be derived from the Faculty of Commerce in training the future captains of industry will be realised, and I trust that the industrial prosperity of Birmingham may continually increase."

Address of the University of Birmingham.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty and to Her Majesty The Queen.

May it please Your Majesties,

We, Your Majesties' loyal and dutiful subjects, the Governors, Graduates, and Students of this University, rejoice that You have consented to grace the opening of these Buildings with Your Royal presence.

Your Majesties are ever ready to encourage and to promote all that contributes to the welfare of humanity; and we, in this place, remember with peculiar delight Your consistent interest in the advancement of learning, and in the progress of the sciences and arts. These Buildings owe their existence to a like interest on the part of many of Your subjects, and it is our earnest desire to realise the intention of our founders and benefactors, and to send forth from our walls men and women well equipped to serve the cause of true education, and to further the material and intellectual well-being of their fellows, throughout Your Majesties' ancient Kingdom and British Dominions beyond the Seas.

Guided by our Chancellor, whose inability to be present on this memorable occasion we deeply regret, we have made no attempt to give an appearance of finality to our present undertaking. Rather do we regard it as capable of indefinite expansion. Whilst the field of scientific research is ever widening, and its discoveries demand yearly a fresh application to the facts of life, the claims of the humaner studies become none the less imperative; and in both these branches of human activity, which can only flourish side by side, we realise the need of continual development. But we believe that the work we have begun, upon which this day Your Majesties set the seal of Your Royal approbation, can confidently be entrusted to the generosity and to the devoted service of the generations that are to come.

Your Majesties' ready response to our humble invitation has filled us with gratitude—especially as You, Sir, are "The Visitor" of our University, under the Charter granted to us by the illustrious and ever beloved Queen Victoria. Your actual Presence affords us the greatest encouragement, and the recollection will act as a stimulus in the future. It is our earnest hope that Your Majesties may be convinced of our hearts' loyalty and love, and may retain a pleasant impression of this visit to our University—a visit to which we have long looked forward, and which we shall not forget.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following gracious Answer:—

"I thank you most heartily on behalf of the Queen and Myself for the loyal and dutiful Address of Welcome which you have handed to Me.

"It gives Me special pleasure to open this magnificent building which is a splendid memorial of the generosity and public spirit of the leading citizens of Birmingham.

"No one can regret more than I do that your distinguished fellow-citizen, the Chancellor, is not with us to-day to witness the completion of a scheme which has always been so dear to his heart.

"For the wonderful progress of higher education in this country we have largely to thank the great Universities established in our principal cities. No nobler object for munificence can be found than the provision of the necessary equipment for such education; an equipment which, in view of the diverse and elaborate requirements of modern schemes of instruction, must be costly; but, without which, these schemes, however carefully designed, will prove fruitless.

"Such Institutions as this are of paramount importance in enabling students to obtain in their native city instruction in science and technology, in art and mathematics, which in former days they were compelled to seek in places far distant from their homes, at an expense which, in some instances, they could ill afford. The Universities also foster a wholesome rivalry and encourage the growth of the highest form of public spirit. A man educated at this University will be a better citizen of Birmingham and a better subject of the Empire.

"The Faculties of Science, Arts, Medicine, and Commerce established in this University represent four great branches of Education likely to be of the highest utility to your students.

"To you, gentlemen of the Staff, I have to say that I highly appreciate your disinterested and earnest labours on behalf of the University and the community, and I learn with pleasure that you hold yourselves ready to expand your curriculum as experience may suggest.

"To you, the students, I say that the honour and dignity of this University are largely in your hands, and I look to you to initiate and hand down worthy traditions to your successors.

"I pray that the blessing of God may attend your labours."

The following Address was presented to The King on the occasion of Their Majesties' visit to South Kensington, on Thursday, the 8th July, when His Majesty laid the first stone of the new buildings of the Imperial College of Science and Technology:—

May it please Your Majesties,

We, the Governors, Professors, Students, and Staff of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, desire to offer this humble expression of our gratitude for the gracious presence of Your Majesty and of Her Majesty The Queen at the ceremony of laying the first stone of our new buildings.

The Imperial College, founded under a Royal Charter granted by Your Majesty on the 8th of July, 1907, represents the latest, and as we trust, the most effective, development of the great movement towards Scientific and Technical Education which arose out of the Exhibition of 1851.

Standing at South Kensington, in the midst of the imposing buildings which mark the progress of that education in its various branches, we cannot forget that it was to Your Majesty's Father, the illustrious Prince Consort, that the movement largely owed its original inspiration. At a time when small regard was generally paid to either scientific or artistic instruction, the wise foresight of His Royal Highness anticipated what is now universally recognised as one of the prime needs of our national life.

Of the institutions now comprised in the Imperial College, the Royal School of Mines was not entirely transferred from its original home in Jermyn-street until the year 1880. The Royal College of Science did not receive its title until 1890, having gradually gathered under one roof the scientific departments, such as those of Chemistry, Physics, Geology, and Biology, which had grown up round the Royal School of Mines with which it was then incorporated. In 1906, the new buildings in Imperial Institute-road, provided accommodation of the most improved kind for the study of Chemistry and Physics. Meanwhile, the Corporation and Livery Companies of the City of London had planned the Central Technical College, of which Your Majesty laid the first stone in the year 1881, for the study of Chemistry, and in particular, of Engineering. As the result of the Report of a Departmental Committee, instituted by the Board of Education in 1904, the three Colleges were welded into the new Imperial College, with the declared object of giving the highest specialised instruction, and of providing for the most advanced training and research in the various branches of science, especially in its application to industry.

The further development which we trust will result in the rising of an important group of buildings in the neighbourhood of this stone, has been rendered possible in the first place by the Royal Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851, who have given the sites, by the liberal grants provided by the Government and the London County Council, and by the generosity of private donors, among whom the late Mr. Alfred Beit, other members of the firm of Wernher, Beit and Company, the Goldsmith's Company, and the Bessemer Memorial Committee, have been conspicuous.

It is the earnest, and we believe well grounded hope of the Governors, that this Imperial College, thus honoured to-day by Your Majesty's countenance and approval, and by that of Her Majesty the Queen, may in the coming years justify its title by providing a principal centre of the most advanced teaching and research in science on its practical side, not only for the United Kingdom, but for the whole of Your Majesty's Dominions, and that it may stand second in dignity and character to no other kindred institution in the world.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following gracious Answer:—

"I thank you most heartily on behalf The Queen and Myself for the Address from the Governors, Professors, Students, and Staff of the Imperial College of Science and Technology. It is a great pleasure to Me to lay the foundation stone of your new buildings.

"The concentration of various associated Colleges into one Institution, which was effected by Our Order in Council of July, 1907, has always seemed to Me to be an admirable scheme for the furtherance of scientific instruction, which

My dear Father had so much at heart; and the names which appeared in the first list of the Members of the Governing Body were sufficient in themselves to give the College a very high status in the educational world.

"The purposes of the College, as stated in the Charter, are to give the highest specialised instruction and to provide the fullest equipment for advanced teaching and research in various branches of science, especially in its application to industry. In recent years the supreme importance of higher scientific education has, I am happy to say, been fully recognised in England; and as time goes on I feel more and more convinced that the prosperity, even the very safety and existence of our country depend on the quality of the scientific and technical training of those who are to guide and control our industries. The rapid growth of knowledge makes it necessary for the teacher of any branch of applied science to be a specialist of a high order, and the most accomplished specialist cannot impart the full advantage of his knowledge without that complete provision of apparatus for research and instruction which this College will supply.

"The College has already given admirable results, and we may well look for a steady increase in the number of students and in the efficiency of the instruction provided.

"The thanks of the country are due to those public-spirited donors through whose generosity a large portion of the funds have been provided for this great work, and I join in your appreciation of their munificence. I think it is especially fitting that the great discoveries of the late Sir Henry Bessemer, to which the remarkable development of the engineering industries in the last half-century is largely due, should be commemorated by the equipment of the new laboratories of this Institution.

"I pray that the blessing of God may attend the future of the College and the high destinies which I anticipate for its work."

Whitehall, July 23, 1909.

The KING was pleased, on Thursday, the 22nd of July, at Buckingham Palace, to present to Arthur Eccleshall, an employee of the London and North-Western Railway Company; to George Henry Smith, of Woburn Sands, Bedfordshire; to James Kennedy Chapman and Thomas McCormack, both of Jarrow; and to James Vivian Reed, lately Second Mate of the steamship Afonwen, of Cardiff, the Albert Medals of the Second Class, which have been conferred upon them by His Majesty for gallantry in saving or endeavouring to save life, as detailed below:—

ARTHUR ECCLESHALL.

On the 2nd October, 1908, between 1 and 2 P.M., three children were making their way over the level crossing at Bushbury Railway Station, where Eccleshall was employed as a porter. A light engine was approaching at the time, travelling at about 10 miles an hour, and seeing that the children's lives were endangered Eccleshall shouted to them, when two of the children ran forward and got clear of the rails on which the engine was travelling, while the third, a little boy, tried to escape by running between the platform and the rails; the engine was almost upon him when Eccleshall jumped from the platform in front of the engine and lifted the child clear of the railway track. In so doing he was struck by the engine and thrown into the four-foot way, being rendered unconscious.

GEORGE HENRY SMITH.

On the 24th October, 1908, a workman at the Woburn Sands Brickworks, named Charles Griffin, was precipitated to the bottom of one of the kilns owing to the roof collapsing, and was imprisoned by hot ballast and bricks, the upper part of his body alone being free. His comrade Smith on hearing of the accident at once went to his rescue, but to effect an entry proved to be a work of some difficulty as the wicket through which the bricks were taken into and removed from the kiln was almost completely blocked. He succeeded, however, in reaching his comrade and in removing the bricks and ballast imprisoning the fallen man, who was eventually drawn up to the top of the kiln by means of a rope fastened under his armpits. Griffin subsequently died of the injuries he sustained.

JAMES KENNEDY CHAPMAN AND THOMAS MCCORMACK.

On the 27th November, 1908, workmen were engaged painting the inside of an iron tank in the stokehold of a steamer lying in dry dock at Jarrow.

Owing to the fact that very strong fumes were given off by the anti-corrosive paint or solution used the men were working in relays, each squad of three men being relieved after 10 or 15 minutes had elapsed.

A workman named Graham was overcome by the fumes, and the chargeman, Archibald Wilson, sacrificed his life in endeavouring to save Graham.

Thomas McCormack, who had already been affected by the fumes while at work in the tank, went to Wilson's assistance, but was himself rendered insensible, and was rescued by James Kennedy Chapman, Works Manager at the Dock, who, having pulled McCormack out, re-entered the tank and endeavoured to save Graham, but was himself overcome by the fumes.

The rescue of Chapman and Graham was eventually effected from the top of the tank.

JAMES VIVIAN REED.

On the occasion of the earthquake at Messina on the 28th December, 1908, the steamship Afonwen, of Cardiff, was lying at her moorings, having arrived at Messina on the 24th December.

The first intimation the Master of the ship (Captain William Owen) had of the disaster was on being awakened in the early morning of the 28th December by the noise of the upheaval and the commotion caused by the tidal wave, but owing to the darkness and the dense clouds of dust the full extent of the disaster could not be realised for some time. The danger to shipping claimed the first attention of the Captain, but having satisfied himself as to the safety of his vessel he proceeded ashore with his crew, as the dawn broke, to render assistance.

The particular act of gallantry in respect of which the Albert Medal has been awarded was performed when a building of five storeys was reached, where children were noticed at a great height from the ground crying for help. The interior of the building had for the most part collapsed, and one of the walls had disappeared; the structure was therefore in a very dangerous condition.

The Captain having given the word, Henry Smith, Able Seaman, and, shortly after, James Vivian Reed, Second Mate, swarmed up a rope to the rescue of the children, who had lowered string by means of which the rope was hauled up and made fast. The rescue of the children having been effected, three persons were lowered down from a story above.

Henry Smith, in pursuit of his calling, is away at sea and therefore was not able to attend at the Palace yesterday. His medal will be presented at a later date.
