

A Guard of eight Gentlemen at Arms were on duty over the Royal Coffin throughout the Service.

The Remains of His late Majesty King Edward the Seventh, of Blessed Memory, lay in State in Westminster Hall from Tuesday, the Seventeenth of May, to Friday, the Twentieth of the same month.

During the Lying in State, Four Gentlemen at Arms stood at the head of the Coffin, and four Yeomen of the Guard stood at the four corners of the Catafalque. Two Officers of the Household Cavalry and Brigade of Guards were also stationed on either side, and a native Orderly Officer of the Gurkha Rifles at the foot of the Coffin.
