

sions. He has invariably exhibited great courage under fire and devotion to duty, and set a fine example to all ranks.

7563 Private W. Hutchins, 2nd Battalion, Royal Irish Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Private Hutchins assisted to carry the Colonel of his Regiment, who had been severely wounded, out of action. In doing so he had to proceed for some distance along a road which was being swept by an extremely heavy shell, machine-gun and rifle fire. His coolness and bravery were very marked.

6 Company Serjeant-Major G. H. Hutchinson, 1st/4th Battalion, Lincolnshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. The enemy having thrown large bombs into a trench, killing an Officer and burying two men, he organised a digging party, and in spite of further bombing succeeded in rescuing the men alive. Company Serjeant-Major Hutchinson has exhibited great bravery and performed excellent work since mobilisation. At a later date he was unfortunately severely wounded by shell fire.

8944 Private J. Hutchinson, 2nd Battalion, Leinster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a heavy bombardment he volunteered, with another man, to carry in a wounded man from an exposed position. Whilst attempting this his comrade was killed and he himself wounded, but in spite of this he went on, reaching the wounded man and carrying him into safety.

5373 Company Serjeant-Major E. Hutchinson, 2nd Battalion, Bedfordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. After the enemy had gained a footing at an adjacent point of the trench he displayed great bravery and skill in organising counter-attacks, and in stopping very determined efforts by the enemy to extend their holding.

7028 Private G. Ingle, 4th Hussars.

For conspicuous gallantry. During the attack when advancing with his troop he was badly wounded in the head from shell fire. Seeing his troop leader, Lieutenant Radcliffe, severely wounded and unable to move, he, with the assistance of a Non-Commissioned Officer, procured a wheelbarrow from a farm, and in turn they wheeled the Officer back to Brigade Headquarters under a very heavy shell fire the whole time. On reaching there Private Ingle collapsed from loss of blood.

7551 Acting Company Serjeant-Major G. H. Inman, 1st Battalion, Royal Berkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry during an attack, when he rendered invaluable help to his Officers in leading over strange and difficult ground and afterwards in reorganising his company under very trying circumstances. Throughout the war he has shown great bravery.

210 Serjeant P. Inman, 1st/5th Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry, when, as Signalling Serjeant, he assisted, during heavy bombardment, in keeping communication open under very trying conditions. Since that date he has, on many occasions, performed similar good services with coolness and bravery.

2176 Serjeant W. Irvine, 1st/7th Battalion, West Riding Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous good work. He is full of courage and always ready for patrols or bombing parties.

779 Acting Serjeant A. Ivens, Military Mounted Police.

For conspicuous gallantry and zeal; he has carried out his difficult and dangerous duties with the greatest energy.

14496 Battery Serjeant-Major W. B. Jacklin, "F" Battery, Royal Horse Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry. Although blown over by a shell, Battery Serjeant-Major Jacklin displayed great coolness and bravery in the performance of his duties.

8131 Serjeant G. H. Jackson, 2nd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry when he led his platoon with great courage and skill. Later he attended and dressed wounded men under heavy fire.

3469 Serjeant G. H. Jackson, 8th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For conspicuous gallantry when he led his platoon in a counter-attack with great bravery and ability, until all were killed or wounded, and afterwards he assisted his officer to hold the communication trench.

9279 Lance-Corporal J. T. Jackson, 2nd Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry throughout the campaign. On one occasion he rushed his gun forward to the captured position, and, although wounded in the hand, he continued at his post until the Battalion was relieved.
