

SECOND SUPPLEMENT

TO

The London Gazette

Of TUESDAY, the 14th of MARCH, 1916.

Published by Authority.

The Gazette is registered at the General Post Office for transmission by Inland Post as a newspaper. The postage rate to places within the United Kingdom, for each copy, is one halfpenny for the first 6 ozs., and an additional halfpenny for each subsequent 6 ozs. or part thereof. For places abroad the rate is a halfpenny for every 2 ounces, except in the case of Canada, to which the Canadian Magazine Postage rate applies.

WEDNESDAY, 15 MARCH, 1916.

War Office,

15th March, 1916.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field:—

Major George Melbourne Herbert, 2nd Battalion, The Dorsetshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination. He led his battalion forward against heavy odds after his senior officer had been severely wounded. On a later occasion he successfully covered a retirement with great skill and tenacity.

Major Henry Kelso Utterson, 2nd Battalion, The Dorsetshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He led his men with marked coolness and skill when assaulting a strong redoubt. He behaved very gallantly in several engagements, during one of which he took command of his battalion when all the senior Officers had been killed or wounded, and led a successful charge resulting in the capture of the enemy's trenches.

Captain Shirley East Apthorp, 96th Berar Infantry, Indian Army.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a retirement, when it was found that two wounded men had been left behind, he immediately volunteered with a private to return some 300 yards to their rescue in face of a heavy fire from the advancing enemy. A serjeant and private were guarding the wounded men, and between them all they brought them back into safety.

Captain George de Grey, 2nd Battalion, The Norfolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in the performance of his duties as Adjutant. He repeatedly crossed fire-swept zones in order to take orders, send up ammunition and direct reinforcements, until he was severely wounded. His cool bravery had twice previously been brought to notice.

Captain Andrew Henry Jukes, 9th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army (Staff Captain, 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade).

For conspicuous good service and ability as a Staff Captain, Intelligence. Captain Jukes organised on two occasions enterprises against the enemy trenches, with marked success. His enterprise and careful training has resulted in most excellent work on the part of the Scouts.

Captain Duncan Eberts MacIntyre, 28th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry when leading an assaulting party after personal reconnaissance. Having reached the enemy trenches, Captain MacIntyre acted with great promptness, and later showed great coolness and presence of mind in the selection of a suitable line of retirement.

Captain Thomas Anthony Stewart Swinburne, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry and continuous good work in action, notably when a mine was exploded by us in close proximity to the enemy. Directly our bombers had made good the near edge of crater, Captain Swinburne organised and controlled the digging parties to consolidate it. This work was carried out under heavy fire. Later he explored the far edge of the crater and descended the mine shaft, as it appeared that some of the enemy had been entombed by the explosion.

Captain Kenneth Churchill Craigie Taylor, 29th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry when leading bombers in a raid on enemy trenches. Although wounded, Captain Taylor jumped into the trench, and disposed of several of the enemy with bomb, revolver and bayonet. Later he withdrew his men most coolly, and assisted in taking back wounded.

Temporary Lieutenant Robert Uchtred Eyre Knox, 8th Battalion, The Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. When firing a "West" gun one of the grenades landed in our own parapet. Seeing that two of his men could not possibly get under cover, he rushed to pick up the grenade and throw it over the parapet. Just as he reached it it exploded. Although by an extraordinary chance he was only slightly injured, it was a fine example of bravery. He has several times undertaken tasks requiring coolness and daring.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Lieutenant) Richard Oliver Warder, "A" Battery, 78th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery (Special Reserve).

For conspicuous gallantry. During a heavy bombardment, when the other Officers and many men were temporarily injured and three gun emplacements had been damaged, Lieutenant Warder, with one bombardier, continued to fire the fourth gun. He personally brought up ammunition from a cellar which was under fire.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to confer the Military Cross on the undermentioned Officers and Acting Warrant Officer, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field:—

Captain Charles Stanley Barber, 3rd Field Company, Australian Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry. An opening having been driven into a hostile listening tunnel, Captain Barber, with a few men, crawled through on hands and knees, surprised the Turkish sentry, and, by barricading a large portion of the hostile tunnel, materially strengthened the advanced post.

Captain Duncan Donald Heron Campbell, Royal Garrison Artillery (attached 112th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery).

For conspicuous gallantry when directing the fire of his battery. After his observation post had been destroyed and the infantry near him had been withdrawn, he remained for four hours exposed to heavy fire, and successfully cut a wide lane in the enemy's wire.

Temporary Captain Silas Danby, 9th Battalion, The Duke of Wellington's (West Riding Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, under heavy shell fire. He rallied stragglers and led them up to the support trenches. Later he returned, and again under heavy fire worked at the ammunition, bomb, and ration supply of his battalion.

Captain Harold Wyn Goldfrap, 103rd Mahratta Light Infantry, Indian Army.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He rallied and led forward men who were without leaders, and set a fine example. Later he ably assisted in the successful defence of a post which was heavily attacked.

Captain Herbert Richard Hall Ireland (Reserve of Officers), 3rd Battalion, The Prince of Wales's Leinster Regiment (attached 2nd Battalion, The Royal Irish Rifles).

For conspicuous gallantry under heavy shell fire during an attack. He prepared the point of entry into the enemy's trenches and organised the attacking parties with great coolness and resource.

Captain Walter Edward Thomson Morland, 1st Battalion, The Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource in action when rallying and leading men up to the firing line. Later he assisted his Brigadier with great ability. His horse was shot under him. On another occasion he distinguished himself by marked courage.

Captain Frederick Gill Powell, 2nd Battalion, The Dorsetshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions. He was brought to notice for good service during two engagements, during one of which he was severely wounded. During a later engagement he was dangerously wounded with his commanding officer when leading a charge at a critical moment in the assault on the enemy's redoubt.

Captain Andrew James Rendel, 81st Battery, 5th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous ability in giving very close support to our infantry during raids on enemy trenches. Captain Rendel, from the front trench, directed his fire with marked ability, and, in addition to giving excellent support to our infantry, prevented hostile counter-attacks from developing.

Temporary Captain Godwin Austen Richardson, 14th Battalion, The Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous devotion to duty. Although wounded in the forehead during an enemy attack, he refused to leave his men, remained with his company under heavy shell fire, and behaved with great coolness and energy.

Temporary Captain Frederick Russell Roberts, 10th Battalion, The Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry, when commanding a party raiding the enemy's trenches.

Although shot through both legs and wounded in many places by a bomb, he kept his head, and continued to give orders with the utmost coolness, without telling anyone he was wounded. His pluck saved many casualties.

Temporary Captain Robert Bruce Singlehurst, 12th Battalion, The Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry when leading a raid on the enemy trenches. Several of the enemy were killed and taken prisoners. Captain Singlehurst, with great coolness and bravery, remained on the enemy's parapet till all his men had been withdrawn, and later went out again under fire to search for and bring in the wounded.

Temporary Captain George Kenneth Thompson, 9th Battalion, Alexandra Princess of Wales's Own (Yorkshire Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry and ability. Although hampered by searchlights and "Very" lights, he led, with great dash and determination, a successful attack on the enemy trenches.

Temporary Lieutenant Edward Duncan Basden, 9th Battalion, The Sherwood Foresters (Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regiment).

For gallantry at Suvla Bay, Gallipoli Peninsula, in successfully carrying out a dangerous undertaking. He has shown a fine example on all occasions regardless of personal risk.

Lieutenant Philip Mundy Chaworth-Musters, 28th Trench Mortar Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In face of a very heavy shell fire he bound up a Corporal who was badly wounded, took him into safety, and then returned and personally worked a gun under circumstances of great difficulty.

Lieutenant Wykeham Stanley Cornwallis, 2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).

For conspicuous gallantry and skilful leading when a mine was exploded by us. Lieutenant Cornwallis organised his bombing arrangements most skilfully, and on the explosion of the mine immediately occupied the near edge of crater under heavy fire, and from this point gave good covering fire whilst the position was being consolidated.

Lieutenant Alexander Arthur Evans, 9th Battery, Australian Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry at Anzac, Gallipoli Peninsula. When one of the enemy's shells fell in a gun pit, exploded seven rounds of 18-pr. ammunition, and set fire to the brushwood covering the pit, Lieutenant Evans, though dazed by the explosion, assisted by only a few men, beat out the fire. He and his party were in great danger of being blown up by the explosion of a magazine which was threatened by the fire.

Lieutenant (temporary Captain) Eustace Osborne Grenfell, Royal Artillery and Royal Flying Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and skill. He attacked single-handed and brought down three Fokker aeroplanes.

Captain Grenfell has shown great bravery and initiative at all times.

Lieutenant (temporary Captain) Timothy Cecil Nelson Hall, 1st Battalion, The King's (Shropshire Light Infantry).

For conspicuous gallantry. After an enemy attack, although injured, he went across the open and carried in a wounded man about 80 yards while the enemy were shelling the position and firing machine guns and rifles. On the same day, by daylight and under fire, he went 400 yards across the open to visit an isolated platoon of his company.

Lieutenant Walter Augustus Gore Hinds, 103rd Mahratta Light Infantry, Indian Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and enterprise. With a small party he led a raid on some advanced enemy trenches. Twenty of the enemy were bayoneted and ten taken prisoners. He set a fine example under heavy shell and rifle fire.

Lieutenant (temporary Captain) Charles Edward Ridley Holroyd-Smyth, Reserve of Officers, 3rd (Prince of Wales's) Dragoon Guards.

For conspicuous gallantry. He assisted with great skill and courage in organising the defence after the explosion of a mine, thus preventing the enemy entering the saps. On the following evening, though subjected to heavy machine gun fire, he crawled into the crater with another officer, destroyed loopholes and machine gun emplacements, and brought back several articles of equipment needed for identification. On many other occasions he has shown great coolness and courage.

Lieutenant Patrick Joseph Cliff Honner, 11th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry. He was Forward Observing Officer, and, when his signallers were buried, he dug them out. His wires were all cut, but, by running backwards and forwards between his post and the Infantry Headquarters, he managed to keep up communication with his battery. He also mended wires himself, and was constantly working entirely alone under very heavy shell fire.

Lieutenant Bertram Osmer Hooper, 19th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous conduct when on reconnaissance. Lieutenant Hooper, with four men, remained in the enemy trench till he had made a careful reconnaissance of the adjacent trenches, thereby gaining much valuable information.

Lieutenant Gilbert Bartle Howarth, 4th West Riding Battery, 2nd West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. During an attack when all communications were cut he volunteered and went to the Infantry Headquarters under very heavy shell fire, thereby maintaining communication while the wires were being repaired.

Temporary Lieutenant George Francis Johnston, 252nd Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry. He organised a rescue party under very dangerous circumstances, and after 21 hours of severe work succeeded in bringing out alive from a mine gallery, which had been wrecked, two men who had been entombed.

On another occasion he rescued a sapper under very dangerous circumstances.

During more than a year he has done excellent work and shown absolute disregard of danger.

Lieutenant Stanley Hornsby Kent, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry. He led a wire-cutting party, which worked for six hours, and then headed an attacking party through the gap. In spite of heavy machine-gun and rifle fire and bombing by the enemy he inflicted severe loss on them. He has on two previous occasions led daring reconnaissances.

Lieutenant Ernest Montagu Leith, 1/5th (City of Glasgow) Battalion, The Highland Light Infantry, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry when commanding grenade parties in an attack. All the officers and several men were wounded, but he at once established and held a barricade, reorganised his party behind it, and, at a critical moment, assured the success of the attack.

Lieutenant Nigel Evans O'Brian, 29th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous bravery during an assault. Lieutenant O'Brian led his section with great gallantry, personally killing several of the enemy and taking others prisoners. He obtained important information of the enemy trenches.

Temporary Lieutenant George Morrison Philip, 12th Battalion, The Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry both before and during a raid on the enemy's trenches. He showed great boldness and skill in the reconnaissance prior to the attack, and was the first man to enter the enemy's trench.

Temporary Lieutenant Algernon Charles Sparks, 97th Field Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative when taking part with some infantry in a raid on the enemy's trenches. With a small R.E. party he made a very successful reconnaissance of the enemy's trenches and then exploded charges in two concrete structures.

Lieutenant Edmund Cyril Staples, 11th Rajputs, Indian Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of Brigade machine guns, and, although wounded himself and with only one wounded man to help him, he continued to work one of the guns at close range and under heavy fire for about an hour until the action closed. At the end he was working the gun alone as the man helping him was a second time wounded.

Temporary Lieutenant Duncan Story, 10th Battalion, The Royal Warwickshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. He was on patrol and within 50 yards of the enemy's trenches when the enemy opened fire and wounded his companion in the body and himself in both legs. Lieutenant Story started to carry his companion back when a bullet, passing through the latter, shattered his own hand. Unable to carry him further Lieutenant Story remained with him till he was dead and then with difficulty made his own way back.

Lieutenant Charles Edward Henry Tempest-Hicks, 16th (The Queen's) Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry on many occasions, notably on one occasion when the enemy exploded a mine, which our bombers occupied. Lieutenant Tempest-Hicks was in the crater when the enemy made a bombing attack, and, after getting his working party back, with all the wounded, he returned and reoccupied the far side of the crater till daybreak.

Lieutenant Alfred Syer Trimmer, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry. He led a party of bombers through the enemy's wire and inflicted severe loss on the enemy. Although wounded, he remained behind till all his men had got away from the wire.

Lieutenant Lemuel Allan Wilmot, 29th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry during an assault. Lieutenant Wilmot was under heavy fire for several hours whilst cutting wire. He then led an assaulting party, and, though wounded, superintended their withdrawal.

Temporary Lieutenant Gerald Lionel Wood, 10th Battalion, The Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry when holding a front line trench. During a severe bombardment he was completely buried, and on being extricated found attacking parties against his wire. His prompt and successful control and direction of fire frustrated the attack.

Lieutenant Edward Workman, 5th Battalion (attached 2nd), The Royal Irish Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry under heavy shell fire during an attack. He organised and rallied attacking parties, and, although wounded himself, continued with great coolness to direct operations.

Lieutenant Lewis Younger, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry. He commanded the men covering a wire-cutting party previous to an attack on the enemy, and subsequently led one of the bombing parties up to the enemy's trenches. He personally accounted for several of the enemy.

Temporary Second Lieutenant William Harold Armitage, 9th Battalion, Alexandra, Princess of Wales's Own (Yorkshire Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry. He led out a wire-cutting party before an attack on the enemy's trenches, and, although hampered by the enemy's searchlights and "Very" lights, successfully cut the wire. Two nights previously he had helped a wounded man back from the wire.

Second Lieutenant Arthur James Ashdown, Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve (attached 45th Trench Mortar Battery).

For conspicuous gallantry when commanding a detached section of Trench Mortars. He remained under heavy fire for four hours in a very exposed position, from which our infantry had been withdrawn, and never slackened his fire. When his own section had completed its task, he went to assist other sections. This is not the first time his name has been brought forward for cool bravery.

Second Lieutenant John Geoffrey Biggs, North Somerset Yeomanry, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. He was in charge of bombers, and showed great coolness in organising the defence after the explosion of a mine. He assisted another officer in destroying loopholes and machine gun emplacements in the crater, and in bringing back equipment for identification. On a previous occasion he displayed marked courage when holding an important position.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Captain) Arnold Whitworth Boyd, 1/7th Battalion, The Lancashire Fusiliers, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. He was appointed to command an attack after his

Commanding Officer had been killed, and carried it through with success, displaying great boldness and determination as a leader. When the enemy had recaptured a crater by a counter-attack he at once placed himself at the head of a party of grenadiers and drove them out.

Second Lieutenant Arthur Allen Broomfield, 5th Battalion (attached 2nd), The Royal Irish Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry when leading a raid. He entered the enemy's trenches with a party of 15 men, killed many of them and took some prisoners. He himself with his orderly captured one Officer and one man. He displayed great coolness, courage and power of leadership. During the raid he was wounded.

Temporary Second Lieutenant William Bunting, 8th Battalion, The Norfolk Regiment.

For very gallant conduct when with a patrol which suddenly came under heavy fire from an hostile patrol examining our wire before attack. A second Officer with the patrol having been wounded, Lieutenant Bunting succeeded, with the aid of his patrol, in driving back a second hostile patrol and carrying the wounded Officer to the trenches.

Second Lieutenant James Chatterton, 7th (City of London) Battalion, The London Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability. When the enemy exploded a mine and destroyed a portion of our trench, he double-locked a sap 15 yards from the enemy under heavy fire, and assisted in consolidating the near edge of the crater. On another occasion he displayed great gallantry during a bombing attack.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Arthur William Henry Dean, 252nd Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry. He rescued at great personal risk from a wrecked mine a N.C.O. and a man who had been entombed. He then went further and found another man dead. Within five minutes of his return the whole gallery collapsed.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Caledon Robert John Radcliffe Dollings, 2nd Battalion, The Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuously gallant leading during a night attack. It was mainly due to his promptness and coolness in handling his men that the assaulting party took the position aimed at. He was wounded slightly in three places, but kept up the morale of his men. On a previous occasion he led a successful bombing raid against an enemy working party, and accounted for several of them.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Vyvyan Henry Donnithorne, 11th Battalion (Pioneers), The Hampshire Regiment.

For conspicuous courage when in command of a party consolidating a position under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire.

The example set by Second Lieutenant Donnithorne led to the successful completion of a very hazardous task, he himself being severely wounded.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Lieutenant) William Needham Everitt, 1/4th Battalion, The Duke of Wellington's (West Riding Regiment), Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He carried out a daring reconnaissance, crawling up to and on the top of the enemy's parapet, where he lay making valuable observations within 5 yards of the enemy's sentry and close to two parties of the enemy in the trench.

During an enemy attack he commanded his platoon in a trench only 40 yards from the Germans. Through his cool-headed and prompt action none of his men were injured, and he telephoned back to Headquarters information of the attack.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Captain) John Malcolm Fisher, 1/5th Battalion, The York and Lancaster Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous good service. During an enemy attack, when his senior Officer was incapacitated, he assumed command of his battalion, organised the ammunition supply, arranged for the relief for the night, sent in clear reports to Headquarters, and carried on generally in a manner to inspire confidence.

Second Lieutenant Eric Purslove Glover, 2/1st West Riding Field Company, Royal Engineers, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Four men of his company, out of a party of eight, who were working in the open were wounded by a shell. He at once went out, fetched two stretchers, and, assisted by four men who were not wounded, brought in the wounded men under heavy fire. He personally attended to the two who were found to be alive.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Harold Merriam Greathead, Royal Engineers (Second Lieutenant Defence Forces of the Union of South Africa).

For conspicuous gallantry. When a mine was exploded he led a working party of R.E. across the open to the crater and consolidated the position. He was twice wounded, the second time severely, but continued with the utmost coolness to direct his party. The work was carried out under very heavy fire.

Second Lieutenant James Johnson Haigh, 1/5th Battalion, The York and Lancaster Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. When his Captain was wounded at the beginning of the enemy's attack, he took command, and by his coolness kept up the spirits of his men. He saved many casualties by spotting trench mortar bombs coming and giving warning. He was always in the place of danger, and set a fine example.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Wilfrid Stratton Holloway, General List, attached 180th Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers (formerly 16th Battalion, The Royal Irish Rifles).

For conspicuous gallantry during mining operations. Whilst endeavouring to rescue an Officer who had been incapacitated he was buried by a fall of earth and timber. He succeeded in extricating himself, and eventually reached and dragged the incapacitated Officer to a place of safety.

Temporary Second Lieutenant John Peter Hornung, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry when directing the fire of his battery from our front trenches.

He enabled the enemy's wire entanglements to be cut very thoroughly and his parapet to be breached in two places. Later, when the enemy retaliated on his trench, he repaired under fire with one telephonist his telephone wire which had been cut, and then went back and finished the wire cutting.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Lieutenant) James Leslie Jameson, 1/5th Battalion, The Prince of Wales's Own (West Yorkshire Regiment), Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his Captain was injured early in the day he took command, and set a fine example to his men. Although himself suffering considerably he stuck to his work, and at one time carried bombs to a bombing party, going across the open to do so.

Second Lieutenant George Howard Jones, 3rd Battalion (attached 2nd), The Welsh Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when in command of a patrol. He successfully cut the enemy's wire under circumstances of great difficulty and danger.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Harold Harding Linzell, 7th Battalion, The Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. After a heavy bombardment the enemy exploded a mine, and Second Lieutenant Linzell showed great courage and ability throughout the whole night in leading and directing the working and wiring parties, who put the crater in a state of defence. Although bombed frequently by the enemy, he succeeded in carrying out the work before daylight.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Jack Lancaster Manwaring, 9th Battalion, The Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry. When on patrol duty he successfully completed a reconnaissance although fire from three machine-guns was brought to bear on him. On another occasion he lay out for some hours by the enemy's wire and obtained accurate information.

Temporary Second Lieutenant George Ernest Marden, 9th Battalion, The Essex Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in carrying out on three successive nights a close and protracted reconnaissance of the enemy's parapet at a time when the enemy was very alert. His work was most successful, and performed under very difficult circumstances.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Allan Maughan, 14th Battalion (Pioneers), The Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions when commanding battalion grenadiers, notably when he and Lance-Corporal O'Brien went forward and succeeded in silencing a party of the enemy's bombers.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Leslie Morrison, Liverpool Regiment (attached 1/7th Battalion, The Lancashire Fusiliers, Territorial Force).

For conspicuous gallantry, when in charge of grenadiers, in attacking and capturing a new crater. The enemy counter-attacked and drove our parties back, but Second Lieutenant Morrison led his grenadiers forward again and recaptured the position.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Sydney John Needham, The Queen's Own (Royal West Kent Regiment), attached 2nd Battalion, The Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. He led a raid into the enemy's trench and succeeded in entering it. When the alarm was given he shot the man who gave it. He was badly wounded in retiring. He had previously volunteered for and successfully carried out several daring reconnaissances.

Second Lieutenant Sidney Ernest Pierce, 1/4th Battalion, The King's Own (Yorkshire Light Infantry), Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy commenced their attack he roused his company and opened fire almost immediately. He was thrown down and wounded in several places by the explosion of a trench mortar shell, but he rallied his men, distributed grenades and stuck to his duty till all immediate danger was over.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Henry Archdale Porter, attached 9th (Queen's Royal) Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry. When a mine was exploded he rushed forward leading a bombing party and threw bombs for two hours, covering a working party and keeping back the enemy till the position was consolidated. He was under heavy machine gun, trench mortar and rifle grenade fire.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Dennis Whitehorn Reid, 10th Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs, The Duke of Albany's), attached 30th Trench Mortar Battery.

For conspicuous gallantry when commanding his battery in an exposed position for four hours under very heavy fire. When one of his gun detachments was disabled, he worked the gun himself and successfully cut the enemy's wire.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Arthur Beverley Hepworth Roberts, 9th Battalion, Alexandra, Princess of Wales's Own (Yorkshire Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry. He was one of a party which successfully raided the enemy trenches, and showed great coolness and judgment in directing his men. Two nights previously he had done good work reconnoitring the enemy's position. He also helped two wounded officers to get back to our lines.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Captain) George Graham Roberts, 1/5th Battalion, The York and Lancaster Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry and good work. As the only officer at the time at battalion headquarters he took control with great coolness and ability during an enemy attack. When his senior Officer took over command he visited all the machine guns in the front line and then went to take command of a company, which had lost all its Officers. The enemy were shelling the position at the time.

Second Lieutenant Francis Dudley Rugman, 1/6th Battalion, The Gloucestershire Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. When entering with a serjeant a sap occupied by the enemy he was hung up by wire. The serjeant was wounded and Second Lieutenant Rugman covered his retreat by throwing grenades. While doing this he was himself wounded. Two men of his covering party were also wounded by rifle fire, and Second Lieutenant Rugman, after placing one in a shell hole, assisted the wounded serjeant and one man into our trenches and then returned and brought in the other wounded man.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Captain) Leslie Eric Rundell, 7th (City of London) Battalion, The London Regiment, Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy exploded a mine, destroying a portion of our trench, his prompt initiative and disregard of personal danger under heavy fire enabled the near edge of the crater to be seized and consolidated.

Second Lieutenant Walter Alexander Scales, 1/6th Battalion, The Prince of Wales's Own (West Yorkshire Regiment), Territorial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry. During an attack, by his prompt and energetic action he succeeded in getting his platoon through without injury. Later he assisted in the rescue of wounded men from a wrecked dug-out in full view of the enemy. He has repeatedly carried out good patrol work.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Archibald Alan Schweder, 14th Battalion (attached 9th Battalion), The Sherwood Foresters (Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regiment).

For conspicuous gallantry at Suvla (Gallipoli Peninsula). He voluntarily crept out up a ravine some 120 yards in front of our trenches in broad daylight and destroyed a post of Turkish snipers which commanded the ravine.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Sholto Herries Skrine, 8th Battalion, Prince Albert's (Somerset Light Infantry) (attached 45th Trench Mortar Battery, 21st Trench Mortar Brigade).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy's heavy shells had broken up a communication trench so that he could not move up his trench mortars, he twice went across the open under intense fire to see what assistance he could render to his company commander in the front line. Later he directed from the front line the fire of two batteries and knocked out an enemy trench mortar.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Lieutenant) Derek Noel Stewart-Savile, 12th (Prince of Wales's Royal) Lancers.

For consistent gallantry and good service, notably on one occasion, when in charge of bombers. A mine had been exploded, and he led his men with great coolness into the crater. During the night and following day he made several daring reconnaissances under heavy fire, and materially assisted in the permanent occupation of the crater.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Frank Moxon Stout, attached 20th Hussars.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource.

When he heard of an enemy working party in the vicinity, he took a corporal and light machine-gun down a sap, mounted the corporal on his back to enable the latter to fire over the parapet, and opened fire. Later, mounted on the corporal's back, Lieutenant Stout opened fire, although by this time they had been discovered. Next morning fourteen dead enemy were counted, and more must have been wounded.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Reginald Charles Vaughan, 1st Battalion, The King's (Shropshire Light Infantry).

For conspicuous gallantry. During an enemy attack, after telephonic communication with the front line was cut, he established an observation post on the crest of a hill, and remained there under heavy fire till dusk, sending in valuable reports.

Second Lieutenant (temporary Lieutenant) Duncan Vere Webb, 1st Battalion, The Leicestershire Regiment.

For conspicuous devotion to duty. During an enemy attack he was not only injured, but buried by the explosion of a shell. Though suffering greatly from shock, he insisted on remaining in command of his company for two days, when his C.O. ordered him to report himself to the Medical Officer.

Second Lieutenant James Patrick Wood, Indian Army Reserve of Officers (attached 117th Mahrattas).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy shell fire. He rescued two men from a heap of débris, and was rescuing a third when his arm was shattered by a shell. His conduct during a heavy attack by the enemy was admirable.

Temporary Second Lieutenant Edwin George Englesby Wright, 7th Battalion, Prince Albert's (Somerset Light Infantry).

For conspicuous gallantry. Hearing that a serjeant had been buried in a gallery, he went down and along the gallery to rescue him, but, becoming entangled in some wire, got back only with great difficulty. Later he went down again with a mining officer and recovered the serjeant's body.

His Majesty The KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Distinguished Conduct Medal to the under-mentioned Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and Men for acts of gallantry and devotion to duty in the field:—

19099 Gunner W. Adcock, Headquarters, 94th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions when mending telephone wires under heavy rifle and shell fire.

63222 Gunner A. W. Allen, "M" Battery, Royal Horse Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he volunteered to assist an officer to bring in, under heavy fire, at close range, a bombardier who was lying hit in the head in front of the guns.

74091 Private J. C. Andrews, 28th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry during an attack on the enemy's trenches. He led the bombers to where the enemy were in force, and there killed five and took one prisoner. He gave great assistance in guiding back his party.

7851 Corporal A. Astin, 2nd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a successful attack he crossed the open many times, under heavy fire, in order to bring up supplies of bombs.

995 Private E. R. Atha, 1/4th Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he carried three wounded and gassed men across the open to the dressing station under heavy fire.

21164 Gunner A. J. Atkinson, "A" Battery, 78th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry, when, with a Lieutenant, he carried on the work of No. 1 Gun after all the rest of the team had become casualties.

1488 Lance-Corporal J. Atkinson, 1/5th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment, I.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. Their machine gun had just been withdrawn to its day position when the alarm was given. Lance-Corporal Atkinson and Private Beech got the team together at once, and took the gun back, mounted it and opened fire.

2224 Corporal (Acting Serjeant) O. G. Aviss, 1/4th Battalion, Suffolk Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a very heavy bombardment he rushed his platoon from cover up into the support trenches entirely on his own initiative and without orders.

31389 Corporal A. W. Ayling, 28th Trench Mortar Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry in firing sixty heavy bombs with great skill under a continuous and very heavy shell fire. His face was cut several times by splinters from the gas-checks, but he stuck to his gun and did fine work.

2892 Corporal F. Baddeley, 1/10th Battalion, Manchester Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions when in charge of a grenadier party. He also made a very gallant reconnaissance alone, entering the enemy's trench and bringing back valuable information.

882 Private G. E. A. Baker, 10th Battalion, Australian Imperial Force.

For conspicuous gallantry at Anzac, Gallipoli Peninsula, on 7th November, 1915. One of the enemy's shells fell in a gun-pit, exploded seven rounds of 18-pr. ammunition, and set fire to the brushwood, threatening a magazine containing 300 rounds of 18-pr. ammunition. Private Baker was one of a small party which beat out the fire, regardless of the danger of being blown up by the explosion of the magazine.

10876 Private R. G. K. Baker, 6th Battalion, Somerset Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry. He rescued two sappers who had been hit in the open. He also went out under fire from five hostile machine guns and spent 1½ hours searching for wounded men, bandaging them and bringing them to the first-aid post. On previous occasions he has tended the wounded under heavy fire.

9339 Corporal J. W. Bale, 2nd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry. When on patrol his officer was wounded. Corporal Bale at once sent his patrol in, went back, and brought in his officer under fire which was directed at him. This is the second time he has rescued his officer on patrol.

861 Lance-Corporal R. A. Ballard, 21st Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he endeavoured to save his commanding officer, whose horse had been shot, and afterwards kept the enemy away from his body until he could secure help to bring it in.

3060 Private W. Bancroft, 1/4th Battalion, West Riding Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when during the gas attack and under very heavy shell fire he went back over the open from the front trench to his commanding officer to report the state of affairs.

10390 Private E. L. Barrett, 2nd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a successful attack Privates Richards and Barrett took their telephone wire over the parapet, established and maintained communication. They lay out in the open for three hours and repaired the wire whenever it was cut.

9159 Serjeant T. Barrett, 1st Battalion, Shropshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry during and after the gas attack. He went across 60 yards of open ground, within close range of the enemy, to bring back a man who had been incapacitated.

3/2470 Serjeant J. Barry, 9th Battalion, Essex Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in carrying out difficult and dangerous reconnaissances up to the enemy's parapet on three successive nights.

52945 Bombardier W. Barry, Headquarters, 81st Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he mended wires throughout the whole of the heavy bombardment.

7/14636 Lance-Serjeant W. Barwick, 7th Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry, when it was largely due to his promptness and courage with his bombers that the enemy was driven back from occupying the crater formed by a mine which they had exploded.

S/3982 Serjeant A. E. Bayne, 9th Battalion, Royal Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a very heavy bombardment he dug out a buried machine-gun and remounted it for action in the next traverse. He then rallied two gun crews, and by his coolness and utter disregard of danger did much to repel the enemy's attack.

2157 Private N. W. Beech, 1/5th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. Their machine-gun had just been withdrawn to its day position when the alarm was given. Lance-Corporal Atkinson and Private Beech got the team together at once and took the gun back, mounted it and opened fire.

9361 Serjeant H. Bennett, 2nd Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For conspicuous gallantry. When on patrol with Lieutenant Kennedy, and near the enemy's wire, a heavy fire was opened on the party, one bullet breaking the officer's leg. Serjeant Bennett and two men of the patrol brought him back into safety over 200 yards under very heavy rifle fire.

15321 Lance-Corporal A. Blanshard, 7th Battalion, Bedfordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Corporal Ivory and Lance-Corporal Blanshard entered a mine shaft during a heavy bombardment by the enemy's trench mortars and rescued two men. This brave act was carried out under very trying circumstances.

20060 Corporal W. Blenkinsop, 10th Battalion, Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry on many occasions, notably when he went twice across 150 yards of open ground to visit a detached bombing post during an intense bombardment by the enemy. His fine example of fearlessness did much to encourage the men under most trying circumstances.

22436 Acting Serjeant A. W. Booth, 6th Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry during a heavy bombardment. When some men had been buried in an isolated dug-out, and two stretcher-bearers had been killed in trying to reach them, Corporal Booth and Private Sutton went out and carried back a wounded man across the open. Private Sutton continued bandaging the wounded till he was himself hit in the thigh.

783 Gunner F. V. Booth, 3rd West Riding Battery, 1st West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when he repaired telephone wires under heavy fire. He had previously been noted for courage and devotion to duty.

C/98 Corporal G. Bothwell, 16th Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry and good service. When on patrol he lost his bearings and found himself near the enemy's trench. While reconnoitring this trench a sentry fired at him, but he replied with a bomb, and in the confusion got away, bringing good information regarding the enemy's trench.

4142 Serjeant H. Bragg, 2nd Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy exploded a mine, burying him and four men, he dug his men out under a hot fire, manned the crater and held it all day.

14496 Private E. E. Brick, 9th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Corporal Hodgson and Private Brick were with a party which most successfully raided the enemy's trenches, although the advance was hampered by searchlights and "Very" lights. About 20 of the enemy were killed.

9/12094 Private W. Bridgewater, 9th Battalion, West Riding Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he went out repeatedly under heavy shell fire and brought in wounded men.

9/12156 Private J. Brogan, 9th Battalion, West Riding Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. When under heavy shell fire he delivered a message, although wounded, returned and volunteered to guide other runners.

22555 Serjeant A. Budd, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After returning much exhausted from an attack, he volunteered to go out for the wounded, and assisted in bringing in three. Later he carried a fourth badly wounded man nearly 400 yards into safety.

74034 Lance-Serjeant W. Burd, 28th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry during an attack on the enemy's trenches. He led the leading bombing party over the parapet and attacked a machine-gun emplacement. He continued bombing out a party of the enemy till he was seriously wounded, and then insisted on coming back alone.

17988 Private E. Callaghan, 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry in passing over 150 yards of open ground under machine-gun fire to rescue two wounded men. While dressing the wounds of a third wounded man he was himself hit in the thigh and through the legs, but insisted on dragging himself in lest the stretcher-bearers should be hit.

70072 Gunner D. S. Cameron, 112th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he continuously mended wires under shell fire. He has been twice wounded, and has shown himself to be utterly fearless under any kind of fire.

7752 Lance-Corporal M. Carthy, 2nd Battalion, Royal Irish Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource during an assault. He led his men with great coolness, reorganised various parties, and cleared a communicating trench of a strong party of the enemy, of whom he captured two.

17883 Corporal R. W. Chamley, 10th Battalion, Durham Light Infantry.

For consistent and conspicuous gallantry. During an intense bombardment by the enemy he left his trench and went across 50 yards to bring a wounded man into safety.

23582 Corporal J. F. Chaney, "C" Battery, 95th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions when mending telephone wires under heavy fire.

2446 Private C. Clements, 1/5th Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous devotion to duty when, at great personal risk, he sent a warning message on his telephone to Headquarters before putting on his helmet. He remained at his post in the front line alone all the morning.

14623 Private J. W. Coates, 15th Battalion, Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry. During an intense and prolonged bombardment by the enemy Privates Coates and Hope remained in their signal station maintaining communication. They repaired their wires under heavy fire, and finally, when their station was demolished by shells and aerial torpedoes, they took turns in carrying messages over 150 yards of open ground to the company commander.

2924 Private A. H. Cole, 21st (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (First Surrey Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a mine exploded he, as stretcher-bearer, tended the wounded under very heavy fire, and carried several men from the crater into safety at great personal risk.

1370 Lance-Corporal L. G. Cook, Essex Yeomanry, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry in digging out a comrade who had been buried by an enemy shell. He was in full view of the enemy at the time, and was himself partly buried by other enemy shells. After carrying his comrade to the dressing station he returned to the front line, though badly shaken, and refused to leave till ordered.

1790 Private A. W. Cooke, 1/5th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when, though wounded in the head, he volunteered to carry bombs to a bombing post, and, in order to save time, went across the open in full view of the enemy. While crossing he was seriously wounded, but handed over the bombs to the post.

4894 Serjeant G. Coombes, 9th Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry. When in charge of a working party behind the bombers after the explosion of a mine he displayed the greatest courage and resource, and volunteered for and carried out every dangerous and difficult task during 48 hours under very heavy fire.

1067 Private C. R. Corral, 22nd (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (The Queen's), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. The enemy exploded 5 mines under some trenches, in one part of which Private Corral was almost the only survivor, but with fine pluck he held up the enemy, flung their own bombs back at them, blocked the sap and held it.

21452 Private F. S. Cox, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack on the enemy he did great execution as a bomber, and later volunteered to go out again and bring in the wounded. He did fine work.

670 Private A. C. Crapper, 1/4th Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when he volunteered to bring back a limber of supplies after horses had bolted. He succeeded in doing this under heavy fire, thus enabling the companies in front line to get their rations.

1480 Lance-Corporal J. R. Crisford, 7th (City of London) Battalion, The London Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy exploded a mine he led a party of grenadiers to the crater under fire and was the first man to reach it.

13364 Serjeant E. Crowther, 9th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he was one of a party which, though hampered by the enemy's searchlights and "Very" lights, successfully cut the enemy wire previous to a raid on his trenches. He also joined in the raid with great dash.

6204 Serjeant J. Currie, 2nd Dragoons.

For conspicuous gallantry in bombing attacks and reconnaissance. He has been twice wounded, and on one occasion, when very weak from his wound, he went out to within 20 yards of the enemy to search for an officer of his regiment who was missing.

849 Bombardier E. M. Dennison, 4th Battery, 2nd West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he repaired telephone wires and thus maintained important communications under heavy shell fire.

8730 Private R. J. Dewar, 2nd Dragoons.

For conspicuous devotion to duty. He was buried by the explosion of a mine, but dug himself out in twelve hours and got back to our lines. He then went out again with a N.C.O. to the crater, and rescued three other buried men within 30 yards of the enemy.

13272 Private J. Dixon, 9th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he was one of a party which, though hampered by the enemy's searchlights and "Very" lights, successfully cut the enemy wire previous to a raid on his trenches. He also joined in the raid with great dash.

1425 Lance-Corporal W. Dixon, 3rd Battalion, Monmouthshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he volunteered with a comrade to cross a canal and bring in two men who were believed to be incapacitated. They succeeded, under heavy fire, in bringing in one man badly gassed.

3568 Lance-Corporal P. A. Donagh, 6th Battalion, Connaught Rangers.

For conspicuous gallantry. At a critical time during a heavy bombardment, when communication with the front trenches was broken, Lance-Corporal Donagh and Private Duffy volunteered to carry messages and successfully did so.

23795 Serjeant W. Dowling, "A" Battery, 112th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry on two occasions. He returned to rescue a disabled man after the gun emplacement had been wrecked and the detachment withdrawn, and, later, returned once more at great personal risk to deal with some ammunition. On another occasion, when within 500 yards of the enemy, he maintained an accurate fire from an advanced position during a four hours' bombardment.

2126 Private P. F. Duffy, 6th Battalion, Connaught Rangers.

For conspicuous gallantry. At a critical time during a heavy bombardment, when communication with the front trenches was broken, Lance-Corporal Donagh and Private Duffy volunteered to carry messages and successfully did so.

7/6491 Colour-Serjeant (Acting Company Serjeant-Major) J. Duggan, 7th Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry, when, during a very heavy bombardment, he attended to and cheered the wounded. He set a fine example of cool bravery.

12770 Acting Serjeant F. Ede, 9th Battalion, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry at Suvla (Gallipoli Peninsula), on 28th November, 1915. He was with a covering party to men wiring when he saw two Turkish snipers close in front. He charged them at once, bayoneted one, and brought in the other as a prisoner. The latter was fully armed and had his magazine charged.

12651 Corporal J. Edwards, 10th Battalion, Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry in volunteering to cross 250 yards of open ground under very heavy fire of all kinds. He was in full view of the enemy, but successfully delivered his message.

3804 Gunner J. W. Elliott, 9th Battery, Australian Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry at Anzac, Gallipoli Peninsula, on 7th November, 1915. One of the enemy's shells fell in a gun pit, exploded 7 rounds of 18-pr. ammunition and set fire to the brushwood, threatening a magazine containing 300 rounds of 18-pr. ammunition. Gunner Elliott was one of a small party which beat out the fire regardless of the danger of being blown up by the explosion of the magazine.

2133 Private W. Ellis, 21st (County of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (First Surrey Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. When a mine exploded he seized with his bombers the enemy's edge of the crater within 30 yards of the enemy's line, and held on there for 3½ hours under heavy machine-gun and trench mortar fire till the near edge was consolidated.

7/14805 Private (Acting Corporal) J. S. Ewing, 7th Battalion, Border Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when, though badly shaken by the explosion of a mine by the enemy, he assisted to lead the bombing attack by which we secured the crater.

18338 Private B. N. Fairgrieve, 7th Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a bombardment by the enemy with bombs and rifle grenades he picked up a grenade which had fallen in the middle of six men and threw it over the parapet, where it exploded. His promptness certainly saved casualties.

9099 Corporal E. J. Gee, 5th Battalion, Royal Berkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when in charge of a bombing sap. He held his own in face of a very heavy bombardment. This is not the first time his name has been brought forward for good work in action.

11984 Private A. Gething, 9th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when he was one of a party which, though hampered by the enemy's searchlights and "Very" lights, successfully cut the enemy wire previous to a raid on his trenches. He also joined in the raid with great dash.

2056 Private J. Gill, 1st/4th Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, T.F.

For conspicuous devotion to duty as Company Signaller in remaining on duty at his instrument for 17 hours, though partially disabled during an attack by the enemy.

4082 Corporal D. Graham, 4th Field Company, Australian Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry at Lone Pine, Gallipoli Peninsula, on 8th November, 1915, when, with an officer and one other corporal, he carried out a daring reconnaissance of the enemy's underground works under very dangerous and difficult circumstances.

10693 Corporal C. E. Grainger, A Battery, 78th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when, though badly gassed, he refused to give in. He persisted in trying to bring up ammunition from a blown-in cellar, which was full of gas, till he was rendered unconscious.

147478 Serjeant C. Green, 252nd Tunneling Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous devotion to duty. He was at work in a mine when it was wrecked and he was himself pinned down by broken ground and fallen timbers. Though badly bruised and shaken he insisted on remaining to assist in the rescue of others as soon as he was himself released.

1540 Corporal E. W. Grice, 1/5th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded while with the regimental transport taking rations to the trenches he stuck to his work, galloped after and caught two runaway mules and delivered the rations. His horse was also wounded. He brought back his transport safely, although he arrived utterly exhausted.

7603 Acting Corporal A. Griffin, 6th Battalion, Lincolnshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry at Suvla, Gallipoli Peninsula, on 3rd December, 1915, when he went out, unarmed and unaided, some 60 yards in front of our trenches, and brought in one after the other the bodies of an Officer and a Serjeant. He had twice previously been driven back by the enemy's sniping fire.

C/95 Company Serjeant-Major H. A. Hamilton, 16th Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry. He went out under heavy fire, and, though wounded himself, made gallant efforts to rescue a wounded man. When the latter succumbed, he made his way back, utterly exhausted.

15347 Private J. H. Hardwick, 8th Battalion, Leicestershire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. When a grenade fell near two sentries in the trench he rushed for it, and threw it over the parapet. It burst before reaching the ground.

12569 Serjeant F. Harris, 1st Field Squadron, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry. When a mine was exploded he assisted in consolidating the crater under very heavy fire of all kinds, completing the work practically single-handed, owing to casualties. When his Officer was severely wounded he took charge, and displayed great energy and courage.

8114 Private G. G. Harrison, 1st Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a heavy and continuous bombardment by the enemy, he went out repeatedly on three successive days and repaired the telephone wires. He was on one occasion partially buried by a high explosive shell, but continued his work with great determination.

5064 Company Serjeant-Major A. W. Hilton, 12th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry during a successful raid on the enemy's trenches, when he ably assisted his Officer. After the withdrawal, although slightly wounded, he went out again under fire to assist in searching for and bringing in the wounded.

2404 Lance-Corporal J. A. V. Hodge, 7th (City of London) Battalion, The London Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy exploded a mine he got his machine-gun into action before the debris had ceased falling, and effectually hindered an enemy "rushing party" from reaching the crater. Only one of the enemy party was seen to return.

14265 Private A. Hodgkinson, 12th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry and tenacity during a successful raid on the enemy's trenches, when in command of half a squad of grenadiers.

17889 Corporal W. Hodgson, 9th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Corporal Hodgson and Private Brick were with a party which most successfully raided the enemy's trenches, although the advance was hampered by searchlights and "Very" lights. About 20 of the enemy were killed.

1 Serjeant W. E. Holdsworth, 1/2nd West Riding Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when, during the whole day, he assisted in the removal of the wounded under very heavy shell fire. He has invariably shown great resource and total disregard of danger.

3014 Private H. Homer, 8th Battalion, Royal West Surrey Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in volunteering to go out and bring in a wounded man, and successfully carrying out his object. He was under rifle fire for about two hours.

2648 Private W. F. Hooper, 1/4th Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he laid and mended telephone wires under very heavy shell fire.

21266 Private E. Hope, 15th Battalion, Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry. During an intense and prolonged bombardment by the enemy, Privates Coates and Hope remained in their Signal Station maintaining communication. They repaired their wires under heavy fire, and finally, when their Station was demolished by shells and aerial torpedoes, they took turns in carrying messages over 150 yards of open ground to the Company Commander.

11264 Private J. W. Howard, 2nd Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in volunteering for and carrying out rescue work at great personal risk. Though wounded himself, he continued his work till compelled to desist through loss of blood.

14566 Lance-Corporal R. Howarth, 9th Battalion, Loyal North Lancashire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry and good work with machine-guns on several occasions. When his Officer was wounded during a minor operation, he took charge and carried out his programme successfully. On another occasion, when an enemy machine-gun opened on his own at 40 yards range, he opened fire without any hesitation, and silenced the enemy's gun, although he was in the open and the enemy concealed.

55636 Private J. Hutchison, 19th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry. Lance-Serjeant Jackson and Private Hutchison accompanied the Battalion Grenade Officer into the enemy's trench, and remained there reconnoitring for half an hour. Valuable information resulted from this hazardous expedition.

14619 Corporal J. Ivory, 7th Battalion, Bedfordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Corporal Ivory and Lance-Corporal Blanchard entered a mine shaft during a heavy bombardment by the enemy's trench mortars and rescued two men. This brave act was carried out under very trying circumstances.

79311 Private A. H. Jackson, 31st Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry. A large bomb fell among a party working in the front trench. Private Jackson at once, at great personal risk, drew the fuze out, thus rendering the bomb harmless and saving many casualties.

55763 Lance-Serjeant L. Jackson, 19th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry. Lance-Serjeant Jackson and Private Hutchison accompanied the Battalion Grenade Officer into the enemy's trench and remained there reconnoitring for half an hour. Valuable information resulted from this hazardous expedition.

27478 Private T. E. James, 2nd Battalion, Welsh Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in volunteering to cut through the enemy's wire within a few yards of his parapet, and carrying out his object in spite of his patrol being seen and fired on.

3/8937 Private W. Jefferies, 6th Battalion, Dorsetshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Privates Jefferies and Southcote, after four attempts, finally succeeded in reaching a farm, which was being heavily shelled, and in carrying into safety a badly wounded man.

1296 Lance-Corporal J. Jenkinson, 5th (Cumberland) Battalion, Border Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous and consistent gallantry and devotion to duty when searching for and tending the wounded under fire. Since May, 1915, he has done fine work.

20890 Acting Corporal B. Jennings, 6th Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry at Suvla, Gallipoli Peninsula, on the night of 18th November, 1915, when, during a Turkish bombing attack, he brought in wounded men under heavy fire and recovered the body of an Officer which had fallen into the hands of the Turks.

34559 Serjeant A. T. Jones, "C" Battery, 96th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry during a very heavy bombardment. After the gun detachments had been withdrawn he made his way back to each gun in turn and succeeded in bringing away the dial sights, which would otherwise have probably been destroyed.

9373 Serjeant H. J. Jones, 1st Battalion, Shropshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry when he went out over the open, under rifle and machine-gun fire at very close range, in order to bring in a man who had been gassed in an isolated post. He is always ready to risk any danger.

8705 Private S. Jones, 1st Battalion, Coldstream Guards.

For consistent and conspicuous gallantry. He has constantly volunteered for and successfully carried out rescue work under most dangerous circumstances.

15377 Lance-Corporal T. Jones, 12th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry during a successful raid on the enemy's trenches. He rendered great assistance to his Officer and displayed the qualities of an experienced leader.

2190 Private E. M. Kermode, 1/6th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when he volunteered to assist the wounded of another Company and went across the open under heavy shell fire. He saved at least one life.

11546 Private C. W. Kett, 9th Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when he was one of a party which, though hampered by the enemy's searchlights and "Very" lights, successfully cut the enemy wire previous to a raid on his trenches. He also joined in the raid with great dash.

3592 Private H. Kirk, 23rd Battalion, Royal Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry in crawling across the open within 100 yards of the enemy to fetch water for a wounded comrade. Later he went out again across the open to fetch a supply of bombs, and succeeded in bringing them back although fired at on both journeys.

75070 Lance-Serjeant F. W. Kirkland, 29th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry during a raid on the enemy's trenches. He assisted in cutting the wire, working several hours close to an enemy machine-gun. He helped Lieutenant Wilmot in leading the assault, and, though wounded, he marked the line for the withdrawal. He had previously done excellent reconnaissance work.

6114 Private J. Liggett, 1st Battalion, Royal Irish Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry when acting as orderly to two Officers who were visiting posts. Both Officers were hit by snipers, but Private Liggett dragged them both into a disused trench, bandaged them, went across the open to fetch stretchers, and returned with the stretcher party. All this time he was under heavy fire.

14003 Private W. Lolley, 10th Battalion, Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry. After his signal cabin had been blown in he took a message across 100 yards of open ground in full view of the enemy. He was subjected to machine-gun and rifle fire, but delivered his message and returned.

Stk/466 Private E. Maffuniades, 10th Battalion, Royal Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry in carrying a wounded comrade, at great personal risk, into a place of safety. On a previous occasion he remained out alone with his Captain, who was wounded, dragged him a distance of 100 yards into a place of comparative safety, and remained with him till stretcher-bearers arrived.

12569 Private E. Marks, 3rd (formerly 1st) Battalion, East Lancashire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in voluntarily bringing up ammunition under heavy shell fire, and in voluntarily leaving his dug-out on two occasions, during a heavy bombardment, to dig out men who had been buried. He set a fine example of courage.

1490 Lance-Corporal G. Martin, 5th (Cumberland) Battalion, Border Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a bombardment Serjeant Pagan and Lance-Corporal Martin relaid and repaired telephone wires across 300 to 400 yards of open ground under heavy shell fire, thus maintaining communication.

2169 Lance-Corporal C. A. Mattock, 8th (City of London) Battalion, The London Regiment (Post Office Rifles), T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative. The enemy exploded a mine and were attempting to occupy the crater. Within two minutes of the explosion Lance-Corporal Mattock had moved up his machine-gun, opened fire on them over the parapet, and drove them back. Heavy shell fire was being directed on his trench at the time.

1162 Corporal R. McIntosh, 1/5th (Renfrewshire) Battalion, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when defending a barricade. He jumped on to the firing step and, regardless of danger, directed our bombs into that part of the enemy's trench from which his bombs were coming.

1633 Company Serjeant-Major M. McKean, 1/5th (City of Glasgow) Battalion, Highland Light Infantry, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry during an assault. When his Officer was killed he took command, rallied his men, and led them into the enemy's trench. He set a fine example of cool bravery.

9652 Private J. Miller, 6th Battalion, Somerset Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry in at once going to the rescue of an Officer and his soldier servant, who were buried by a shell. He carried out the rescue in full view of the enemy, and was wounded in five places by snipers.

7813 Serjeant W. J. D. Milsom, 2nd Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Serjeant Milsom and Corporal Wilson organised a rescue party under heavy shell fire, and supervised and assisted in rescue work regardless of continuous sniping.

2176 Corporal G. Mitchell, Leicestershire Yeomanry, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry in holding a sap against a heavy bomb attack. On another occasion he reconnoitred a crater close to the enemy's trenches and brought back accurate information.

1343 Private J. J. Moore, 3rd Battalion, Monmouthshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when, regardless of his own danger, he worked for several hours bringing in men who were wounded and buried in the bombarded area.

33070 Acting Bombardier B. T. Moores, 113th Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry. When repairing important telephone lines a shell fell and exploded near him. Although much shaken he coolly continued to carry out his work under very heavy shell fire.

1422 Serjeant C. Morrell, 2/1st West Riding Field Company, Royal Engineers, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. Four of their working party were wounded by a shell, and, no stretcher-bearers being available, Serjeant Morrell and Corporal Overall assisted their Section Officer to carry the wounded men to the dressing station under continuous and heavy shell fire.

1470 Serjeant M. C. Morton, 1/5th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. He set a fine example of cool bravery all day during the enemy attack. He took messages over round where others had been wounded, and volunteered and took charge of an isolated and important bombing post, where his presence did much to steady the men.

2128 Private F. Mottershead, 1/7th Battalion, Lancashire Fusiliers, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry in volunteering to destroy the entrance to one of the enemy's mine shafts. He carried a bag of explosive round his neck and placed it in position actually within the enemy's trench. He then returned over the wire laying the electric connection. It was later discovered that the entrance had been completely destroyed by the explosion.

2516 Private P. Muller, Oxfordshire Hussars, T.F.

For conspicuous good work in night reconnaissances. On one occasion he entered the enemy's sap, which was unseen from our trench, picked up a rifle and fixed it so that the line could be seen by daylight.

180 Private G. H. Needham, 1/3rd West Riding Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as a stretcher-bearer, when he worked without a break for twenty hours, removing the wounded under continuous shell fire. His endurance was remarkable, and he set a very fine example.

1842 Acting Bombardier G. O. Nelson, Headquarters Staff, 1st West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he repeatedly mended wires under heavy shell fire. He has shown consistent devotion to duty.

11289 Corporal H. Newman, 2nd Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry in getting through the enemy's wire and crawling up their sap. He had previously reconnoitred the ground on six successive nights under very trying conditions.

2341 Corporal C. H. Nott, No. 15 Squadron, Royal Flying Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry on escort duty when acting as gunner. During an attack in the air he was hit in the eye and rendered unconscious, the machine being also considerably shot about and the engine damaged. On recovering consciousness he at once made use of his gun with such good effect that he drove off the enemy's aeroplane, which had pressed the attack. Without his fine pluck it is almost certain that the machine and personnel would have been lost. This gallant N.C.O. is likely to lose his eye.

19740 Private F. Nuttall, 2nd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination. During a successful attack he stuck to his work all night with only one hand, after having been wounded in the other almost at the commencement of the operations.

18842 Private J. O'Brien, 14th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry and great ability as a bomb-thrower, notably on one occasion when, with Second Lieutenant Maughan, he silenced a party of hostile bombers by throwing 60 grenades into their saps.

6/1234 Private E. P. J. O'Donoghue, Special Reserve (attached 2nd Battalion), King's Royal Rifle Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry in helping to cut the enemy's wire during a bombing raid. This was done under heavy shell fire.

476 Corporal W. Oliver, 1st/3rd West Riding Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination in assisting the Medical Officer for 20 hours without a break in tending the wounded over an area which was continually being shelled.

1433 Corporal P. Overall, 2/1st West Riding Field Company, Royal Engineers, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. Four of their working party were wounded by a shell, and, no stretcher-bearers being available, Serjeant Morrell and Corporal Overall assisted their Section Officer to carry the wounded men to the dressing station under continuous and heavy shell fire.

1265 Serjeant R. Pagan, 5th (Cumberland) Battalion, Border Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a bombardment Serjeant Pagan and Lance-

Corporal Martin relaid and repaired telephone wires across 300 to 400 yards of open ground under heavy shell fire, thus maintaining communication.

12576 Private F. Polden, 7th Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in rendering first aid to several wounded men of his company. He then volunteered to assist another company, dressed the wounds of several, and carried them on his back into safety under heavy fire. This is not the first time he has shown similar bravery and devotion to duty.

57705 Bombardier A. D. Pope, 21st Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he went out as linesman and kept up the forward communications of his battery under heavy shell fire.

10663 Private A. Prentice, 5th Battalion, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a very heavy bombardment he went on his own initiative, under heavy fire, to warn the machine-gun teams in an isolated dug-out to stand to. He was wounded in the head, but completed his errand, and then returned to his own gun team till ordered back by an Officer. His example was very fine.

A.15 Serjeant J. Presslee, 7th Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry in voluntarily crawling out under shell fire and rescuing a wounded man under very trying circumstances. He then went out again under shell fire and brought in another wounded man on his back.

97515 Sapper B. M. Prior, 154th (formerly 89th) Field Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry when rescuing wounded men under continuous machine-gun fire. He remained out a long time, and showed great pluck and determination.

7243 Serjeant C. W. Rabjohns, 5th Battalion, Coldstream Guards (formerly 3rd Battalion).

For conspicuous and consistent gallantry when in charge of signals, frequently mending wires under heavy shell fire.

1357 Serjeant G. Raynor, 5th Battery, 2nd West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous initiative during an attack. He was in command of the forward gun, and opened fire without orders as soon as he smelt gas. He tended two of his men, and then, with one other man, kept up a steady fire.

2115 Private R. Redmond, 3rd Dragoon Guards.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions, notably when he bombed a crater previous to a reconnaissance and assisted to destroy the defences. When the party was met by heavy fire on its return, he reconnoitred, and found another way back.

778 Bombardier R. Rhodes, 11th West Riding Battery, 4th West Riding (Howitzer) Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he repeatedly mended telephone wires under heavy shell fire. His name had previously been brought to notice for good work.

6584 Private F. Richards, 2nd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry. During a successful attack, Privates Richards and Barrett took their telephone over the parapet, established and maintained communication. They lay out in the open for three hours, and repaired the wire whenever it was cut.

R. 14338 Private A. Romeril, 2nd Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps.

For conspicuous gallantry in helping to cut the enemy's wire during a bombing raid. This was done under heavy shell fire.

4815 Regimental Serjeant-Major E. N. Ryder, 21st Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry, when he picked up a comrade who was hanging by his foot from the stirrup, placed him on his own horse, and charged through the enemy, by whom he was surrounded.

5956 Lance-Corporal P. Ryan, 12th Lancers.

For consistent good service and gallantry, notably on one occasion when a mine was exploded. He assisted his Officer in leading up the bombers to occupy the near lip of the crater, and then by himself, under heavy fire, made a daring reconnaissance of the further lip.

11348 Lance-Serjeant W. H. Scott, 12th Battalion, Northumberland Fusiliers.

For conspicuous gallantry prior to and during a successful raid on the enemy's trenches. He ably assisted his Officer in a daring reconnaissance, creeping through the enemy's wire and on to their parapet. He has proved himself a fearless and resourceful N.C.O.

1905 Acting Corporal G. A. Self, 9th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For conspicuous gallantry. During an intense bombardment he mounted a machine-gun in the ruins of its emplacement and opened fire on a party of the enemy who were seen advancing. He has been noted for other acts of gallantry and has set a fine example.

13659 Lance-Corporal F. Seymour, 10th Battalion, West Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in voluntarily going out under heavy shell fire and bandaging wounded men. Later, with his company Commander, he went out across the open under machine-gun fire, searched for and found a serjeant and three men who had been buried.

6678 Private H. Shaw, 4th Hussars.

For conspicuous good service. Serjeant Siddons and Private Shaw volunteered for and successfully carried out two daring reconnaissances of the enemy's trenches. They advanced with great skill to within 8 yards of the enemy.

7425 Acting Serjeant A. G. Simpson, 6th Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry at Suvla on 18th November, 1915, when, during a bombing attack by the Turks, he brought in wounded men under heavy fire and recovered the body of an officer which had fallen into the hands of the Turks.

3764 Saddler Staff-Serjeant W. A. Simpson, 21st Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry. He dismounted and rescued a comrade by shooting a tribesman, and then went on foot to the assistance of an officer of his regiment and held off the enemy with his revolver. The officer was mortally wounded, and Serjeant Simpson was hit in the shoulder and badly hacked about by swordsmen before he was rescued by some other men of the regiment.

19913 Private F. Sixby, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry when with a wire-cutting party. He cut 16 yards of the enemy's wire and then joined in the attack which followed, displaying great coolness.

A/1213 Gunner C. Smith, 7th West Riding Battery, 3rd West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. Corporal Cooper and Gunner Smith repaired telephone wires in the open under heavy and continuous shell fire.

6434 Serjeant F. Smith, 4th Hussars.

For consistent gallantry and good work as Bombing Serjeant. He has rescued wounded men under trying circumstances, and has always set a fine example.

6857 Serjeant L. Smith, 21st Divisional Cyclist Company, Army Cyclist Corps.

For gallantry and devotion to duty. A patrol raiding enemy trenches was discovered and heavily fired on. One officer and one man were wounded during the retirement. Serjeant Smith assisted in bringing in the wounded man, and went out again with assistance and rescued the wounded officer.

13624 Private W. Southcote, 6th Battalion, Dorsetshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Privates Jefferies and Southcote, after four attempts, finally succeeded in reaching a farm, which was being heavily shelled, and in carrying into safety a badly wounded man.

13085 Private H. A. Southgate, 2nd Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. He had volunteered for a raiding party, and, during the retirement, when his Lieutenant got caught in barbed wire and was badly wounded, he turned back under a hot fire and dragged him to a place of safety.

22338 Private W. Stout, 15th Battalion, Durham Light Infantry.

For conspicuous and consistent gallantry, notably on one occasion when he volunteered to lead a party to repair our wire on ground constantly swept with machine-gun fire. He remained out over two hours and completed his task. He always sets a fine example.

8/13740 Serjeant W. O. M. Street, 8th Battalion, South Staffordshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when, in full moonlight and although frequently fired at, he made a good reconnaissance of the enemy's wire. He shows a total disregard for danger, and has an excellent influence on the men under him.

18186 Private E. Sutton, 6th Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry during a heavy bombardment. When some men had been buried in an isolated dug-out, and two stretcher-bearers had been killed in trying to reach them, Corporal Booth and Private Sutton went out and carried back a wounded man across the open. Private Sutton continued bandaging the wounded till he was himself hit in the thigh.

616 Gunner N. Tennant, 11th West Riding Battery, 4th West Riding (Howitzer) Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when he continually repaired telephone wires under heavy shell fire.

5874 Corporal G. Tester, 20th Hussars.

For consistent gallantry and good work in the trenches, notably when, with Lieutenant Stout, he took a machine-gun up to a sap-head. He had got on the Lieutenant's back in order to fire the gun, but got off 150 rounds, killing many of the enemy at a range of 30 to 40 yards. He was all this time under heavy fire.

6385 Company Serjeant-Major M. G. W. Theobald, 2nd Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions, notably when he manned a crater immediately after the enemy had exploded a mine and himself brought into safety many wounded men under heavy fire.

14801 Lance-Serjeant J. Thomas, 2nd Battalion, Grenadier Guards.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination. During an attack by the enemy, when all his bombers were killed or wounded, he held his ground single-handed by bombing, and kept the enemy at bay till support arrived.

2370 Private J. H. Thomas, 1st/6th (Glamorgan) Battalion, Welsh Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry in volunteering to cut through the enemy's wire within a few yards of his parapet, and carrying out his object in spite of his patrol being seen and fired on.

1738 Private E. Thompson, 1/1st Lincolnshire Yeomanry, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative on 3rd September, 1915, during a submarine attack on a hired transport, when he took the wheel and assisted the Master of the ship until the attack was ended.

S/6660 Lance-Corporal A. Thomson, 9th Battalion, Royal Highlanders.

For conspicuous gallantry. Although wounded in the head early in an enemy bombardment, he stuck to his machine-gun, and, by sitting on the parapet in full view of the enemy, gave warning of their infantry attack. He remained with his section till it was relieved next day.

20268 Lance-Corporal A. Tierney, 20th Hussars.

For consistent good work and gallantry in the trenches, notably when a sap-head had been blown in and the garrison killed. He was the first man of the bombers to replace them, entering the damaged sap with the greatest coolness.

16685 Private F. H. Timms, 5th Battalion, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry. He cleared the ruins of a farm with his bombers, and put a machine-gun out of action. Later, when the enemy reassembled, he volunteered to go out alone, and by skilful bombing delayed their counter-attack. He was severely wounded.

73836 Acting Bombardier L. A. Toye, 24th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

For conspicuous devotion to duty when he was on duty at the Observation Post during the attack. He stuck to his work and maintained communication with two batteries. He has done consistent good work since the commencement of the campaign.

7174 Private T. Trueman, Special Reserve (attached 2nd Battalion), Royal Irish Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry. He bombed the enemy in the most fearless manner, killing several of them. Later on his way back he picked up a wounded N.C.O. of the Royal Engineers and carried him on his back into safety under heavy fire.

74076 Lance-Corporal G. S. Turner, 28th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination. Prior to a night attack on the enemy's trenches he crawled out with a corporal, and in 4½ hours cut a passage through the enemy's wire just under a machine-gun. He then joined in the assault, was one of the first to enter the enemy's trenches, and displayed great courage.

1576 Lance-Corporal S. Warner, 7th (City of London) Battalion, The London Regiment, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy exploded a mine he immediately led forward two men under heavy fire, and occupied a ledge overlooking the crater and close to and in view of enemy snipers. Though wounded early in the day, he held his position till the crater had been consolidated.

12770 Private H. Waugh, 7th Battalion, York and Lancaster Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when he repeatedly repaired the cable under heavy fire, thus maintaining communication.

9178 Private H. Wayman, 7th Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry in repeatedly repairing a telephone line under heavy shell fire.

259 Private W. H. N. Webber, East African Mounted Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry. He made a valuable reconnaissance of the enemy's position, remaining out alone for 60 hours in close touch, the enemy observing his movements until the attacking troops arrived. He then rendered a valuable report.

1426 Driver S. S. White, Headquarters Staff, 2nd West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry when he was out mending telephone wires under heavy fire for about 40 hours.

549 Gunner E. Whitfield, 10th West Riding Battery, 4th West Riding Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry, when, during the bombardment, he repaired telephone wires under heavy shell fire. He had previously been noted for good work.

8309 Lance-Corporal C. Wilson, 9th Battalion, Suffolk Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry when he volunteered and took back to the dressing station across the open under heavy shell fire three badly wounded men.

6017 Corporal G. W. Wilson, 2nd Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment.

For conspicuous gallantry. Serjeant Milson and Corporal Wilson organised a rescue party under heavy shell fire and supervised and assisted in rescue work regardless of continuous sniping.

10485 Private R. Wilson, 2nd Battalion, Royal Irish Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination. He had taken four of the enemy prisoners, when one turned and threw a bomb at him while the rest ran away. Private Wilson thereupon bayoneted one, shot two, and made the fourth a prisoner again. All this was done single-handed.

1538 Private A. Wotherspoon, 1/5th (City of Glasgow) Battalion, Highland Light Infantry, T.F.

For conspicuous gallantry. Noticing that all but one of a grenade party were disabled, he at once went to their assistance, and, although he had never thrown grenades before, started throwing them. Several of the enemy got to within a few yards of him, but he continued bombing till the attack was repulsed.

20924 Private L. Zuidema, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous coolness when with the covering party cutting wire. One of the party was killed, but he at once took charge, steadied the men, and carried on the work.

The undermentioned have been awarded a Clasp to their Distinguished Conduct Medal for subsequent acts of conspicuous gallantry:—

17751 Acting Second Corporal J. P. Campbell, 5th Field Company, Royal Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry. When a grenade fell a few feet from him he rushed forward, and threw it over the parapet, thereby saving many others from certain injury. He could easily himself have taken cover.

(The Distinguished Conduct Medal was awarded in Gazette dated 3rd June, 1915, page 5337.)

7436 Private W. J. A. Campbell, 2nd Battalion, Royal Irish Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry when accompanying an Officer into the enemy's trenches. He showed an utter disregard of danger. He and the Officer captured one enemy Officer and one man, and Private Campbell killed two others himself.

(The Distinguished Conduct Medal was awarded in the Gazette dated 5th August, 1915, page 7678.)

B. 1652 Temporary Corporal W. Hobday,
8th Battalion, Rifle Brigade.

For conspicuous gallantry when, on a moonlight night, and after several attempts had failed, he took out a small party, and under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire brought in a wounded Officer, who was lying in front of the enemy lines.

(The Distinguished Conduct Medal was awarded in the Honours Gazette dated 14th January, 1916, page 602.)

81597 Serjeant E. R. Milne, 10th Canadian Infantry Battalion.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He cut 21 yards of the enemy's wire in six hours, returned to the trenches, and led the attacking party through the wire, subsequently commanding one of the bombing parties. He was four times wounded, but remained with his men throughout with the greatest determination.

(The Distinguished Conduct Medal was awarded in Honours Gazette dated 14th January, 1916, page 615.)

8556 Serjeant W. Siddons, 4th Hussars.

For conspicuous good service. Serjeant Siddons and Private Shaw volunteered for and successfully carried out two daring reconnaissances of the enemy's trenches. They advanced with great skill to within 8 yards of the enemy.

(The Distinguished Conduct Medal was awarded in Gazette dated 16th January, 1915, page 580.)
