

2nd Lt. George William King, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry during a long period of active operations as liaison officer with the infantry. He succeeded in sending back valuable information, which could only be obtained by personal reconnaissance under heavy fire.

2nd Lt. Leonard King, Glouc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his platoon under very heavy machine-gun fire after suffering severe casualties. On the next night he showed great coolness in steadying his men during a heavy bombardment.

2nd Lt. Ernest Oliver Cavan Lambart, R. Berks. R.

For conspicuous gallantry during operations. During a very heavy bombardment he kept his gun teams steady by his coolness and fine example. Later he went into "No Man's Land" and helped to bring in the wounded under heavy fire.

Temp. Lt. Geoffrey Lambert, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion in going on two nights into "No Man's Land" and bringing in wounded men from within 50 yards of the enemy's trenches under continuous machine-gun and rifle fire. During the preparations for an attack he displayed great bravery in laying out a new fire trench. Though wounded on his return he remained out till dawn, to search for a missing man.

Temp. 2nd Lt. Frederick Norman Stocken Lampard, North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry. When a mine was sprung by us, he was in charge of the covering party during the consolidation of the crater. The enemy left their trenches and attacked the party with bomb and rifle fire, but 2nd Lt. Lampard, with an R.E. officer, kept them at bay till reinforcements arrived. Though wounded in the head he stuck to his post till morning.

Rev. Albert Ernest Laurie, temp. Chapl., 4th Class, A. Chapl. Dept.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. He worked all day in helping the wounded back from the front line trenches under heavy fire. When his brigade was withdrawn he remained and continued collecting wounded for two days and two nights under heavy fire, showing an utter disregard of personal danger.

Capt. Robert Law, R. Dub. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led the leading company of his battalion with great determination against the enemy's front line. One shell carried his helmet away and another lifted him off his feet, but he reorganised his company and led another attack.

2nd Lt. Gilbert Barnet Legge, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For consistently gallant and good work as forward observing officer, notably when, in order to establish an observation post, he worked forward through captured trenches infested with snipers. He captured two of the enemy in so doing.

Temp. Lt. Edward Francis Lepper, R. Ir. Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. When consolidating his position in the enemy's line he repeatedly repulsed bombing attacks, and organised counter-attacks from any stray men whom he could collect. He held his trench for over 12 hours until the garrison was reduced to one serjeant and himself.

Temp. Lt. James Arthur Liley, R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when tending the wounded in the open and in the front trenches under very heavy shell fire. His coolness under heavy fire had a great moral effect on the men.

Temp. Lt. Alan Scrivener Lloyd, R.F.A.

For most conspicuous gallantry as forward observing officer. He laid his wire to the most advanced infantry trench, and from thence, under heavy fire, directed the fire of his battery until the enemy battery was knocked out.

Lt. (temp. Capt.) Thomas Alfred Lowe, R. Ir. Regt.

For conspicuous gallantry during a hostile counter-attack on a village. Captain Lowe collected all men in the vicinity, and led them under heavy fire in a bayonet charge which drove out the enemy. Later he led another bayonet charge against enemy reinforcements, finally driving them away.

Temp. Lt. Frederic Gerald Bazalgette Lucas, Bedf. R.

For conspicuous gallantry during a period of active operations. After his senior officer had been killed he commanded his company with great coolness and judgment, and although wounded continued to advance, sticking to his post for three hours.

Temp. Capt. Fred Ball Ludlow, Notts. and Derby. R.

For gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raiding party. Although badly wounded during the assembly, he continued to organise and control the advance till compelled to return through loss of blood.

2nd Lt. Alexander Lindsay Macdonald, R. Highrs. and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and skill when carrying out artillery and patrol work at low altitudes and under heavy fire. On one occasion he dispersed a large body of infantry by machine gun fire from 1,200 feet, and then at once turned a battery on to another advancing battalion, causing many casualties.

Lt. Roderick Oswald Corderoy Macdonald, R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry in connection with the registration of his own and other batteries of the brigade. His duties often took him out in front of our own troops. He carried out his work with extraordinary determination and at great personal risk.

Capt. George Reginald Edward Gray Mackay, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to
