

Lt. Gilbert Edwards, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a bombing party against the enemy, who, with the aid of flammenwerfers, had gained a footing in a critical part of our trench. He succeeded in driving them out and restored the position.

Lt. William James Howard Ellwood, Fld. Arty.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as liaison officer with an infantry battalion during an attack. He kept up a supply of valuable information throughout the operations, and showed great courage and initiative in his work.

Lt. Frank John William Fane, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded he led his platoon with the utmost dash and determination to their final objective, and during a hostile counter-attack an hour afterwards he insisted on using a rifle, although he had to be propped up in order to do so. He was then wounded a second time, having set an example of pluck and gallantry which greatly inspired all with whom he came into contact.

Lt. Arthur Bertram Fennell, Engrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as brigade signalling officer. All of his linesmen except one having become casualties, he personally with the remaining linesman went out with reels of wire under intense artillery and machine-gun fire and got communication through at a critical time. During the operations he took no rest, but remained continually on duty in the shelled area. He accomplished splendid work all the time at great personal risk and under tremendous disadvantages.

Lt. William Henry Fenton, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men with great courage through a heavy enemy barrage to assist in a counter-attack. Having attacked successfully, he personally went on patrol into enemy territory and brought back information of the utmost value. He extended his position, taking in previously unoccupied trenches, so strengthening the position, and held on under heavy fire until relieved two days later.

Lt. Reginald Charles Ferguson, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men in an assault upon enemy trenches under heavy hostile machine-gun fire with great gallantry and disregard for personal safety. When the advance of his company was temporarily checked by a machine-gun, he collected three men, rushed the post, killed the team and destroyed the gun, thus making further advance possible.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Thomas Henry Fisher, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company to their objective with great success, and consolidated the captured position. Later, when called on to support another battalion, he took his company forward and consolidated again under a most intense bombardment. He showed the greatest courage, resource and initiative throughout.

Capt. (A./Maj.) Edward Norman Gilliat, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in the assault with the greatest dash and courage, exposing himself recklessly and thinking only of the success of the action. Having consolidated his front line with great rapidity, he remained in command under heavy artillery fire until seriously wounded.

Capt. (A./Maj.) John Pollands Girvan, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout an attack he led his company with the greatest skill and courage, continually going forward into our own barrage at great personal risk in order to check men who were advancing too fast. He directed his men amidst the fiercest shelling, and it was due to his gallant personal example that the hostile counter-attacks were fruitless. His reports were invaluable, and it was largely due to him that the enemy were held back from the captured ground.

Lt. Robert James Goodman, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as Adjutant during several days' severe fighting. When most of the officers had become casualties, he went forward and took command of a bombing party, and by his determination and gallant leadership gained and consolidated his objective.

Lt. George Gordon, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his company. With the company on his left annihilated and his left flank in the air, he made repeated attacks on the enemy trench, and although severely wounded in the arm, continued to encourage his men, and set them a splendid example until he collapsed from loss of blood. His gallantry and determination deserve the greatest praise.

Lt. James William Green, Infy.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of Stokes mortars. Having led them across No Man's Land under heavy enemy fire, he disposed them with such skill that he was able to inflict heavy casualties on the enemy during repeated counter-attacks. He also personally captured an enemy trench mortar, and after learning the method of operation from his captives, brought it into action against the enemy with deadly effect. His initiative and able leadership at all times set a magnificent example to his men.

Lt. William Eric Griffin, Ry. Troops.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a shell burst on a road, wounding eight men, he rushed to the spot and rendered first aid to six of the wounded, and had all taken in a vehicle to the nearest dressing-station.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He organised his platoon for the
