

T./2nd Lt. Alexander McCallum, Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during ten days of severe fighting, in which he invariably displayed the greatest courage and coolness under the heaviest fire. On one occasion his right flank was "in the air," and, seeing the enemy advancing, he attacked them with his platoon, and drove them back, maintaining his position intact.

T./2nd Lt. William Curren McCallum, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion during a hostile attack. It became evident when the bombardment commenced that the horses and vehicles would have to be withdrawn. In spite of a heavy and continuous bombardment he personally superintended the packing and dispatch of all the vehicles, and succeeded in saving the entire equipment and horses of his section. Throughout the day he set a splendid example to all ranks.

T./2nd Lt. William Martin McCash, R. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when ordered to cover the crossing of a canal for the battalion. He took up a position with his platoon and held the enemy, who were advancing in force, until the battalion had got across. He displayed great coolness and ability in face of very heavy machine-gun fire.

T./Lt. Alexander Anderson McConnell, Dur, L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his company commander was wounded he took charge and fought on until hemmed in on three sides, and almost out of ammunition, when he withdrew in good order under heavy fire, successfully extricating his men from a very difficult situation.

Qrmr. and Hon. Capt. John McDonald, E. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His energy and initiative in organising the supply of rations and ammunition to his own unit and others were of great value. He daily accompanied the ration convoys to the line, often through heavy shell fire, and supervised the distribution of food in the actual front line. As senior quartermaster in the division he set a fine example to those of other units.

2nd Lt. Francis John Elliott McFarland, R. Ir. Fus., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Though wounded early while in a difficult position under heavy machine-gun fire, he continued to encourage his platoon. Wounded again, he stayed till the situation was cleared.

Lt. George Fraser McGachen, Conn. Rang., Ches. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As second in command of his company he led an attack in face of very heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, and took his objective.

T./Capt. David Mackay McGoun, R.A.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as a leader of offensive patrols. It is entirely due to his determination and skill that his patrol has destroyed many enemy machines. His consistent keenness, his gallantry, and untiring energy have at all times set a magnificent example to all the pilots and observers in his squadron. He has personally destroyed many hostile machines, never hesitating to attack, and on all occasions displaying a fighting spirit which has earned the admiration of all in contact with him.

T./Capt. Roger McGrath, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the bearers of his field ambulance. During the enemy's advance and while exposed to heavy shell and machine-gun fire, he organised his bearers and evacuated many wounded, who otherwise would have been captured. He set a fine example of energy and courage.

Lt. (A./Capt.) William Thomas McGuinness, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a battery under heavy fire throughout the day, he engaged the enemy over open sights at 1,500 yards range, and checked their advance until reinforcements arrived from the rear. At night he successfully withdrew all the guns of his battery without loss. His coolness and gallantry throughout the day were an inspiration to all ranks.

Lt. Donald Clark McKelvie, Sea. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer took up his company to occupy a forward position, without previous knowledge of the situation. He occupied the position, gaining touch with the flank troops, and initiating energetic patrol action. On the following day, after staving off an attack, he immediately organised a counter-attack, which was successful.

2nd Lt. Felix Quinn McKeown, R.G.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His section was under intense shell fire, and he found it impossible to keep the communication line working, so he established a post in the open, and from there maintained connection all day with the brigade, and got messages through to the section by runners. He was wounded in the evening.

T./Lt. Samuel Brown McKinley, R. Scots.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in organising the defence line of the battalion. On one occasion, finding that the enemy were penetrating a gap on the left flank, he collected some runners and signallers and by an immediate counter-attack ejected the enemy and restored the position. His quick grasp of the situation and splendid example of courage undoubtedly prevented what might have been a dangerous encircling movement by the enemy.
