

T./Lt. Ivan Ynyr Glynne, W. York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in charge of thirty men in a raid. He was the first to enter the enemy's trench and capture a prisoner. He then led his men to their objectives, personally entering dug-outs in his search for the enemy and thoroughly mopping up the whole area. Finally he personally captured and brought in an enemy officer. He showed fine courage and powers of leadership.

T./Lt. Jerome Marcus Goodbody, R. Dub. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when the enemy crossed a bridge on his left flank and established a trench mortar. Through his initiative and direction of rifle fire he knocked out the team and forced the enemy to withdraw in disorder over the bridge, causing numerous casualties. Throughout successive withdrawals his coolness under fire did much to steady his men.

2nd Lt. Arthur Goodier, Manch. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. Before reaching the enemy trench his party were greeted with a shower of bombs, which wounded half his men. He rallied the survivors and led them on, killing six of the enemy before withdrawing in accordance with orders. Previous to the raid he patrolled the enemy trench for five nights and obtained valuable information.

2nd Lt. Andrew Gordon, R. Scots.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer showed great dash and courage during a battalion raid on enemy trenches. By working down a sunken road with a Lewis gun section he reached a position from which he enfiladed the enemy third line, thus neutralising their fire until the remainder of the company arrived. He was the first to reach the enemy's third line, and throughout the operation set a fine example to his men.

Lt. (A./Maj.) George Donald Gould, Dur. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He rallied a number of stragglers of various units and established a line which considerably delayed the enemy's advance. He showed fine courage and determination.

Lt. Ernest Frederick Graham, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Shortly after the opening of a heavy gas and high-explosive bombardment his major was wounded. He took command of his battery, and continued firing at the enemy, who had approached to within 400 yards. It was due to his courage and initiative that the enemy were held up at an extremely critical period of the day.

2nd Lt. Gerald Francis Graham, R.G.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst acting as forward observation officer. Though the observation post was under continuous fire throughout the day, he sent important information to his battery commander, and engaged many targets, causing heavy casualties to enemy concentrations.

T./Lt. Robert Harold Graver, Leic. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He was the only company commander left with the battalion after the initial attack, and worked unceasingly, reorganising parties of men and taking up successive lines of resistance. After his company ceased to exist as a fighting unit he continued to fight with any men he could collect, and was with the last troops to withdraw on relief. He did very fine service.

T./2nd Lt. Harry Graves, Shrops. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack, when he led forward his own company and other troops which he had rallied in a counter-attack, and drove the enemy back, establishing the line in its former position. It was entirely due to his energy and initiative that a very dangerous situation was averted. Again, later, he led a successful counter-attack, and throughout the fighting displayed a fine example of courage.

2nd Lt. Herbert Greene, R.G.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He accompanied a raiding party, having volunteered to act as guide. When the officer in charge fell into a lake he took command and led the party on its objective. Finding this unoccupied, he pushed on to some dug-outs, which he thoroughly bombed, and shot one of the enemy himself. He was slightly wounded in the head during the operations, but continued to direct the party.

Capt. (A./Maj.) Robert Alfred Greenwood, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in evacuating the wounded. When a bridge was blocked and partly submerged by a fallen tree he supervised the clearing, and helped to carry the wounded across under heavy shell fire on both banks. Though severely shaken by a shell bursting and partially burying him, he carried on until all the wounded were safely across the canal.

T./Capt. Norman McAlister Gregg, M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid. He untiringly attended to the wounded under heavy enemy fire until the last man was cleared, and showed great coolness and devotion to duty. He worked persistently throughout the raid in the open, and searched for any wounded that might have been overlooked. He behaved splendidly.

T./2nd Lt. John Lawrence Griffin, Hamps. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer went forward with eight
