On the 20th December the Minister referred to the High Court for decision the questions whether persons employed as Second hand on a private yacht.

Housemaid waitress and housemaid in a seaside Boarding House, which though not closed to visitors at any time of the year is occupied to its full capacity only at certain holiday seasons, were or were not employed persons within the meaning of the Act of 1920.

The Judge held that the employment of the second hand on the yacht was not employment in domestic service, and was accordingly not excepted under paragraph (b) of Part II of the First Schedule to Act of 1920. The employment of the housemaid-waitress was held to be employment in domestic service, but in a business carried on for the purposes of gain, and accordingly not excepted under the paragraph (b) referred to above. They were therefore required to be insured.

Consequently contributions under the Act are payable in respect of persons so employed.
