

yards of the shores, hardly realise that they are citizens of a great seaport.

I trust that the King Edward Memorial Park, by the splendid pageant of shipping visible from the upper terrace, will help to correct this modern blindness, and open a window through which the people of the neighbourhood may enjoy a breath of sea air and a glimpse of a wider life. I am glad to learn that these sentiments are shared by the Local Authority, and that the Borough Council, with a most laudable desire to commemorate the maritime glories of old Stepney, have erected in this Park a memorial to Willoughby, Frobisher, and the other sixteenth century navigators who made the district famous in the history of Polar exploration. May the children who play in the King Edward Memorial Park be inspired by the vision of the passing ships to follow the example of their forefathers, who set sail from Ratcliffe and Blackwall in the heroic age of English seamanship!

I dedicate this Park to the memory of King Edward VII, and I declare it for ever open for the use and enjoyment of the public.
