Whitehall, April 7, 1936.

His Majesty The KING has been graciously pleased to award the Edward Medal to George William Beaman, Norman Baster and James Pollitt, in recognition of their gallantry in the following circumstances:—

On the evening of the 22nd August, 1935, two explosions occurred at South Kirkby Colliery, Yorkshire, in a district about 1½ miles from the shaft. It was thought that these were due to a gob fire and it was decided to seal off a part of the district by erecting stoppings.

At 3 p.m. on the 23rd August this work was in progress, and there were 21 men in the district, some near to the face and the others, of whom Beaman was one, at distances varying up to some 100 yards away. A further explosion then took place, severely injuring a number of the men. Beaman and two others, who had rescue apparatus, at once proceeded to look for and succour the injured, and with the assistance of others who followed shortly afterwards ten men were carried out of the district alive. One died almost immediately, eight within a few days, and one recovered. During the progress of these operations, which involved repeated journeys to and from the face, some of the rescuers who were not equipped with special apparatus were considerably affected by fumes.

It was found that everyone had been accounted for except a man named Dale; and although there was an increasing risk of a further explosion owing to accumulations of gas, search for him was renewed by Baster, who was the colliery agent, with the manager and four rescue men, including a man named Ball. They located Dale but he was found to be dead. They proceeded to remove his body, but while they were doing so a further explosion occurred and all six members of the party were burned. This explosion was severe enough not only to cause injury to the rescue party, who were comparatively near the face, but to affect those nearer the shaft who were looking after the men first injured. Baster got back and did what was possible to reassure these men and then with three others (of whom Beaman was one) he went in and removed Dale's body and later went in again for a certain distance to look for Ball, one of the rescue party injured by the second explosion, who was said to be missing. Baster, who had no apparatus, was this time so much affected by fumes and fatigue that he had to retire, but Beaman and another man conducted some further search without success. It was then reported that Ball had reached the shaft.

Later in the evening, however, after the rescue parties had left the mine, it was found that Ball was after all still missing. There were reasons for fearing that a further explosion might shortly occur and that a fresh search might only swell the casualty roll; but volunteers were anxious to descend the mine and make a further attempt, and one of the rescue parties so formed entered the district and succeeded in finding Ball and bringing him safely to the surface. In this final operation, which was conducted at once with determination and prudence, J. Pollitt acted as captain of the rescue party.

Great courage and pertinacity were displayed by many others who took part in these operations and it has not been easy to discriminate between those concerned, but it is considered that Beaman rendered services of outstanding merit in the first stage, Baster in the second stage and Pollitt in the final stage of the rescue operations.

The Home Secretary gives notice that in pursuance of Section 2 (1) of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act, 1920, he has made Orders authorising the employment on two day shifts of:—

(a) Women of 18 years of age and over in the cord making department at the Globe Rope Works, and in hackling and spinning of manilla and sisal fibre at the Hercules Works of Messrs. Hawkins & Tipson, Ltd., East Ferry Road, Millwall, E.14, subject to conditions as to weekly alternation of shifts, accommodation for clothing and facilities for washing and for taking meals.

(b) Women of 18 and young persons of 16 years of age and over in manufacturing hair cloth in the carding and spinning department at the works of Messrs. Edward Webb & Sons (Worcester) Ltd., Sheriff Street, Worcester, subject to similar conditions.

(c) Women over 18 years of age in letterpress printing in the machine room at the works of Messrs. Paul & Matthew, 29, Murraygate, Dundee, subject to similar conditions.

(d) Women and young persons over 16 years of age in the Cutting and Finishing Rooms and North Weaving Shed at the Greenfield Carpet Works of Messrs. Archibald Stevenson & Son, Bertram Street, Burnbank, Hamilton, subject to similar conditions, and to a condition that transport facilities may be required.
