Vienna, Febr. 3. N. S. On the 30th of the last Month, Ibrahim Bassa of Romania, Ambassador from the Grand Signior to the Emperor, made his Publick Entry here. The Prince of Fundi, Marshal of the Emperor's Court, and Count Rappach, Sergeant Major of the Imperial Guards, being appointed the Emperor's Commissioners to receive and accompany the Ambassador on this occasion; They went in their Coaches about 9 in the morning to a Plain near Simmering, about two Miles from this Place, where they found the Soldiers and others that were to attend at the Entry, ranged in such manner, that they termed a large Circle: The Ambassador who came in his Coach from Schwechat, and the Imperial Commissioners, arrived there about the same time, and at a convenient distance they alighted out of their Coaches and complimented each other, and Prince Fundi presented to the Ambassador a Horse, with a Saddle, Bridle and Housings, very richly adorned with Gold and Precious Stones, which was sent to him by the Emperor, to make use of at his Entry; Then the Ambassador, the Prince of Fundi and the Sieur della Torre, the Emperor's chief Interpreter, went into the Ambassador's Coach, and Count Rappach into his own Coach, and the whole Cavalcade came in good Order to the Bridge over the River Vienna; There they made a halt, and the Ambassador and the Imperial Commissioners came out of their Coaches, and the Ambassador put on his great Turban and a very rich upper Vest, and mounted the Horse which was presented him; Prince Fundi and Count Rappach mounting also on Horseback, but after having gone a little way, he desired leave of the Imperial Commissioners to change his Horse and make use of one of his own, which was readily consented to; The like having been done by the Turkish Ambassador sent to the Emperor in 1665. They entered into the City, and proceeded to the Ambassador's House in the following Order. First came 2 Harbingers, then several Led-Horses, and after them a Party of Dragoons, having Colonel Ribas at their head, who commanded the Party of Horse that Guarded the Ambassador in his Journey hither; Next 6 Led-Horses, 6 Trumpets and 2 Kettle-Drums, a Troop of 120 Men of the Burgers of this City, New Cloathed and well mounted with red and white feathers in their Hats; 7 Led-Horses, 6 Trumpets and 2 Kettle-Drums; a Company of Foreign Merchants, about 80 in number, all on Horseback and richly dress'd; 9 Led-Horses, 6 Trumpets and 2 Kettle-Drums; The Burgo-Master of this City, followed by a Troop of 120 of the chief Burgers, all Cloathed in black Velvet laced with Gold, with white Feathers in their Hats; Divers of the Ambassador's Servants marched next, and after them 6 Wagons, wherein were the Presents which the Sultan sends to the Emperor; 10 Mules, and 16 very fine Horses, led each by 2 Men; The Ambassador's own Guards, being about 100, with the Dil-Bashi their Captain at their head; They were divided into 2 Companies, and some of them wore Tygers Skins, after the Fashion of the Hussars; His Excellency's Aga and divers other of his Officers, a green Standard being carried before them; The Ambassador's Master of the Horse, and two others of his Principal Officers, and several other Led Horses; 3 Ejendis or Men Learned in the Alcoran, one of whom was formerly the Ambassador's Tutor, with a red Standard and two Horse Tails carried before them, followed by two Turks, having each on their Horses Crupper a live Leopard, in the same manner as they carry them in Turkey when they make use of them to Hunt with; 7 of the Ambassador's own Led-Horses with very rich Housings, and after them 5 of the Emperor's Grooms and 12 Turkish Officers, 12 of the Emperor's Trumpets and 2 Kettle-Drums, the Emperor's Chief Harbinger with 4 of his Af-

by 6 of the Ambassadors Footmen with small Habards in their hands; Then came the Ambassador himself on Horseback, the Prince of Fundi being on his right hand, and Count Rappach on his left, and the Sieur della Torre followed them; 4 of the Ambassador's Servants on foot bore up his Train, and the Ambassador's, Prince Fundi's, Count Rappach's, and the Sieur della Torre's Footmen, walked on each side; 12 of the Emperor's Led-Horses followed and after them came the Ambassador's Sword-bearer, the Horse which the Emperor had sent him to make use of at the Entry led by two Men; The Ambassador's Treasurer, the Keeper of his Seal, his Pages and other Officers of his Chamber, armed with Lances, Bows and Arrows; his Catona or Steward, his Divan Effendi or Chief Secretary, and his Imam Effendi or Chaplain, after whom was borne a great Standard and 2 Banners, the Ambassador's Trumpets, Kettle-Drums and other Musick, his Litter, his Coach with 6 Horses; and the Coaches of the Prince of Fundi and Count Rappach, their Led-Horses, and their Grooms and other of their Servants; After these came another Company of the Ambassador's Servants, and a Party of 120 Men of the Prince of Lorrain's Regiment of Cuirassiers, and another of 100 Hussars closed the March. The Emperor's, Guards and the several Companies of Burgers lined the Streets through which the Ambassador passed, which were crowded by an infinite number of Spectators, and the Emperor himself, with the Empress, the King and Queen of the Romans, and the Arch-Duchesses, were pleased to see the Entry from the Windows of the Palace; and the Arch-Duke saw it from the Windows of the Augustine Monastery. The Ambassador being come to the House prepared for his Entertainment during his stay here, he desired the Imperial Commissioners to sit down, placing them at his right hand, and the Sieur della Torre on his left, and a small Table was brought in by two of his Servants, two other Servants brought two Basins to wash in, one of which was presented to Prince Fundi and Count Rappach, and the other to the Ambassador; His Excellency entertained them with Coffee and Sherbet, and expressed much Satisfaction at the manner of his Reception, and presented the Prince of Fundi with a very rich fringed Scarf made of Indian Camels-Hair, and the Count of Rappach and the Sieur della Torre each with a fine Handkerchief, and having returned their Thanks in a very civil manner for the Trouble they had taken, they took their Leaves, and were conducted by him down Stairs to the Street-Door, he giving the Hand to the Imperial Commissioners. The Ambassador's own Regiment is reckoned to be about 500 Men, who have with them 180 Camels, and a very great number of Mules and Horses.

Westminster, Febr. 8. His Majesty came this day to the House of Peers, and being in His Royal Robes seated on the Throne, and the Commons being sent for up by Mr. Aston Deputy-Usher of the Black Rod, and attending His Majesty accordingly, His Majesty was pleased to give the Royal Assent to
