

Flight Lieutenant Alfred Hartwell De-MILLE (Can/J.36365), R.C.A.F., 576 Sqn.

One night in March, 1945, this officer was pilot and captain in an aircraft detailed to attack Nurnburg. During the operation the aircraft was badly hit when attacked by an enemy fighter. A good part of the port aileron was shot away and the aircraft went into a steep dive. Flight Lieutenant De-Mille succeeded in levelling out after much height had been lost. Two petrol tanks had been pierced and much petrol was lost. Nevertheless, Flight Lieutenant De-Mille was able to conserve some of his remaining petrol by skilful use of the engines and flew the damaged aircraft to base. This officer has completed very many sorties and has invariably displayed a high degree of courage and determination.

Flight Lieutenant Angus Alexander McINTOSH (146325), R.A.F.V.R., 248 Sqn.

Now on his second tour of operational duty, Flight Lieutenant McIntosh has completed many sorties including convoy escorts, reconnaissances and numerous attacks on enemy shipping. On one occasion, in February, 1945, he was detailed to complete a reconnaissance of the Norwegian coast between Utsire and the Naze. In the course of this patrol, his aircraft was severely damaged by enemy fire and an engine was rendered unserviceable. Nevertheless, displaying great coolness and skill, Flight Lieutenant McIntosh flew his aircraft back to base, over many miles of sea, where he effected a successful crash landing. On another mission, in April, 1945, he pressed home a very accurate and determined attack upon an enemy U. boat in the Kattegat. A few days later, despite the continued attacks of two enemy fighters, Flight Lieutenant McIntosh made a successful attack on enemy shipping in Pasgrund harbour. His enthusiasm, skill and courage have set a splendid example.

During the flight, a merchant ship escorted by a naval vessel were located. In spite of much opposing fire, Flight Lieutenant Mair came down to a low altitude to execute a straight and level bombing run. Two hits were obtained on the merchantman from which smoke began to issue in great clouds. This officer has taken part in many attacks on enemy shipping and has invariably displayed a high degree of skill and courage.

Acting Flying Officer Stephen ABEL (191247), R.A.F.V.R., 514 Sqn.

In April, 1945, this officer piloted an aircraft detailed to attack enemy troop concentrations at Bremen. When nearing Wilhelmshaven on the outward flight the aircraft came under anti-aircraft fire and was hit. The perspex around the pilot's compartment on the starboard side was shattered. The rudder control sustained some damage. When nearing the target the aircraft was again hit. The aileron controls were affected. A petrol tank was holed and one engine had to be put out of action. The aircraft was difficult to control but Flying Officer Abel completed a good bombing run. Course was set for home but later, it was evident that, owing to loss of petrol, base could not be reached. Flying Officer Abel thereupon headed for the nearest available airfield. Before this could be reached the petrol supply became exhausted. Nevertheless, this resourceful pilot brought his aircraft down safely, landing in a large field. Not one of his crew was hurt. On the outward flight the port engine became troublesome and had to be put out of action. Despite the loss of engine power, Pilot Officer Knight flew on. High mountains had to be crossed but the target was reached. In the face of much anti-aircraft fire a successful attack was executed. Soon after leaving the target the starboard outer engine failed. The propeller had to be feathered. Even so Pilot Officer Knight flew the damaged aircraft to base. He set a splendid example of skill, courage and determination throughout.
