

addition to or in substitution for their normal enterprise of showing films, upon the promotion on their premises of clubs for the playing of Bingo under conditions authorised in law by the Betting and Gaming Act, 1960. Those members included a considerable number who regarded the charges laid down in the Licence Scheme as unfair and excessive. On their behalf, the C.E.A., after having sought without success to negotiate more favourable terms with the Performing Right Society, appealed to the Tribunal. After having had the matter fully argued before it, the Tribunal arrived at the conclusion that the charges made by the Performing Right Society were justified.

The Scheme was nevertheless varied in two minor and non-controversial respects. The first respect was the clarification, in accordance with a re-definition proposed and agreed upon by both parties, of the word "session", which as originally used, had been ambiguous and confusing. The other respect was the elimination from the scheme of a somewhat complicated tariff which had been provided to cover occasions on which further entertainment was provided for the audiences. It was generally agreed that the tariff was not only impracticable to enforce, but also duplicated and conflicted with other existing tariffs.

Subject to this, the Tribunal confirmed the Licence Scheme as from 18th March 1963.

A copy of the Decision may be inspected at the offices of the Tribunal, 24 Kingsway (6th Floor), London W.C.2, during office hours.
