R.58512 Able Seaman Fire Control John James PITCHER, Royal Australian Navy.

On 4th March 1966, Able Seaman Pitcher was, with a party of sailors under instruction, removing a 4.5" Starshell from a turret at the West Head Gunnery Range at H.M.A.S. Cerberus, when he was informed that one of the shells was leaking. He immediately checked and found it hissing from one of the base securing pins. Realising that it might explode at any time, he picked it up and took it to the misfire tank some 20 yards away. Had the shell exploded, it would have caused serious injury and possibly loss of life among the sailors present. By his prompt action and disregard of his personal safety, Able Seaman Pitcher prevented a serious accident.
