(To be dated 17th September 1969)

Detective Inspector Edward Graham PERRY, New Zealand Police.

As Officer in Charge of the Police Armed Offenders Squad at Auckland, Detective Inspector Edward Graham Perry was called to Whangarei to take charge of a dangerous incident involving an armed person who was ensconced in a house with a young baby as a hostage. On several occasions he held the infant at a window of the house and made threats that he would shoot it and then himself. He had a record of previous fire-arm offences and was known to be very dangerous.

All measures taken to persuade him to give himself up failed. He would not respond to persuasion and grave fears were held for the safety of the infant. At great personal risk Detective Inspector Perry broke into the house and after a struggle was able to disarm the man and arrest him. Beyond question he would have used the firearm which he had in his possession but was prevented from doing so by the
