HONOURS AND AWARDS

HOME OFFICE

Whitehall, London S.W.1.
29th September 1970.

SCOTLAND

The QUEEN has been pleased to award The Queen's Police Medal for Gallantry to the late Constable Angus McLeod Mackenzie and to the late Constable Edward Alexander Barnett of the City of Glasgow police force in recognition of their gallantry in the following circumstances:

On 30th December 1969, Constable Mackenzie and Constable Barnett, with other members of the force, entered a house and questioned three men about the contents of two suitcases found there. The party separated to search the house and one of them was shot by a gunman with a pistol. Constable Mackenzie and Constable Barnett heard the shot and ran to the scene. In trying to disarm the gunman, Constable Mackenzie and Constable Barnett were both shot in the head at close range. Constable Mackenzie was shot in the head a second time by the gunman, and was found to be dead on arrival at hospital. Constable Barnett died four days later.

The late Constable Mackenzie and the late Constable Barnett, knowing that the gunman was prepared to shoot to resist arrest, showed great courage in making resolute attempts to disarm him, at the cost of their lives.
