NAVY DEPARTMENT

HONOURS AND AWARDS

CENTRAL CHANCERY OF THE ORDERS
 OF KNIGHTHOOD

St. James's Palace, London S.W.1.
 10th April 1973.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased to approve the award of the George Medal to the undermentioned:

Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Peter Noel DILLY,
 Royal Naval Reserve.

Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly was a guest member of the British Army Axel Heiberg Expedition an Army adventure training exercise named Exercise Icy Mountain Three. Axel Heiberg is an island in the Canadian Arctic and on 9th August 1972 while leading a party of four back to base camp over a badly crevassed area two of the party, Sergeant Scaife and Sapper Lewis, fell into a deep crevasse. Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly secured a rope at the edge of the crevasse and abseiled down. Having abseiled the full length of the rope he found Sapper Lewis and after administering first aid saw Sergeant Scaife a further forty feet down. Realising the risk he ran Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly took off the rope and climbed down to Sergeant Scaife who died shortly after his arrival. He returned to Sapper Lewis who was in a semi conscious state, carried him to the bottom of the rope and tied him to it. Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly then climbed the hundred and ten feet back to the surface and with the help of Lance Corporal Lane hauled Sapper Lewis to the top.

In view of their own exhausted condition it was clearly unwise for Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly and Lance Corporal Lane to attempt to evacuate Sapper Lewis to base camp. Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly therefore treated Sapper Lewis's injuries and ensured his survival by placing him in a sleeping bag in a tent and then set out with Lance Corporal Lane to alert a rescue party.

In descending the crevasse Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly knew that only one man remained on the surface to do anything should a further accident occur and that once he had removed the rope he was beyond even the help of that one man. The crevasse depth was unknown since it went well beyond the hundred and sixty feet down where Sergeant Scaife was found. In addition blocks of snow and ice were periodically falling from the sides of the crevasse and Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly was hit by some of these as he climbed to the surface. Throughout the rescue heavy freezing rain fell and Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly spent some two hours in the crevasse soaking wet and with the temperature at or below freezing point. If therefore it had become necessary to leave him in the crevasse he might well not have survived the eighteen hours until the rescue party arrived. Throughout the operation Surgeon Lieutenant Commander Dilly displayed a high degree of skill and courage.

AIR FORCE DEPARTMENT

HONOURS AND AWARDS

Whitehall, London, SW1A 2HB.
10th April 1973.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased to approve the following awards:

Air Force Cross

Flight Lieutenant Jonathan Stanley DICKENS (687880), Royal Air Force.

On the night of 4th November 1972, Flight Lieutenant Dickens was the duty helicopter pilot on Search and Rescue standby, on "A" Flight, No. 22 Squadron Detachment, Royal Air Force Chivenor. At 2305 hours, with the crew at normal night time readiness of one hour, a telephone call was received from Her Majesty's Coastguards, Hartland Point, stating that a boat with several people on board had run aground on the Bideford Bar at the entrance of the River Torridge. The Whirlwind helicopters which the Flight operates are not equipped for night rescue, but the Coastguards were told that the crew would be prepared to give every possible assistance if the situation became critical. At 0030 hours neither the Appledore Lifeboat, nor Her Majesty's Coastguards, had been able to get a line aboard and a further call was received by the Search and Rescue Flight, requesting helicopter assistance for the distressed vessel, which was now in danger of breaking up. Flight Lieutenant Dickens quickly assessed the situation and accepted the task, despite the exceedingly poor weather conditions. He and his crew were airborne at 0055 hours and arrived at the scene of the incident shortly after 0100 hours. They found the vessel, the 75 foot "Rossekop 2", beam on to the seaward wind, rolling through 45 degrees to port in the heavy surf which was breaking over her. Using the aircraft's landing lights, Flight Lieutenant Dickens surveyed the scene and decided that the only place from which it would be possible to winch was an area approximately six feet square, near the bows. In constant danger of striking unseen obstructions in the poor light, Flight Lieutenant Dickens, under the directions of his navigator, made repeated approaches to the winching area and, in spite of the extremely difficult conditions, succeeded in placing the winchman on board, where it was found that six men, a woman and three children awaited rescue. Holding his aircraft in as steady a hover as possible in the prevailing conditions, Flight Lieutenant Dickens ordered his crew to winch the woman and children up first, and then landed on a nearby beach to hand them over to the Coastguards. He then returned for a further two approaches to the vessel, winching up three men on each occasion. By his decision to accept this task despite exceptionally poor weather and by his outstanding skill, courage and determination, in conditions which were completely outside his experience, Flight Lieutenant Dickens undoubtedly took the lead in saving the lives of the ten people on board the vessel. In so doing, he displayed professionalism of the highest standards and brought great credit to the Royal Air Force.

Air Force Medal

F0686120 Flight Sergeant Richard GAGLIONE, Royal Air Force.

On the night of 4th November 1972, Flight Sergeant Gaglione, an Air Loadmaster, serving as a Search and Rescue helicopter winchman was a member of the duty crew of a helicopter of "A" Flight, No. 22 Squadron Detachment at Royal Air Force Chivenor, called to the assistance of the pleasure cruiser "Rossekop 2", aground on the Bideford Bar, at the entrance to the River Torridge, North Devon. On arrival at the incident, the vessel was seen in the aircraft's landing lights to be lying beam on to the wind and tide, rolling violently through 45 degrees to port, while heavy seas, six to ten feet high, were breaking over her. The only area from which winching could be carried out was approximately six feet square near the bows. Despite the danger of the vessel capsizing, and of his being hit by unseen obstructions in the poor illumination of the landing lights, Flight Sergeant Gaglione immediately volunteered to be winched down on to the vessel in an attempt to rescue the survivors. This was achieved, although in the process he repeatedly hit obstructions and had great difficulty in maintaining a secure foothold on the violently moving and slippery deck. Flight Sergeant Gaglione then made contact with the Master of the vessel, and discovered that, as well as six men, there were three children and a woman on board. Regardless of the imminent danger to his own life, he set about the long and difficult task of evacuating the woman and children. With the first four survivors safely on the beach, Flight Sergeant Gaglione was winched on to the deck on two further occasions. By this time the vessel was beginning to break up and, again using the double lift method, he rescued the remaining six survivors. Throughout the entire winching operation, which took over 25 minutes, Flight Sergeant Gaglione showed complete disregard for his personal safety, and, through his exceptional courage, determination and skill, undoubtedly saved the lives of the ten people on board the vessel. In so doing he has brought great credit to the Royal Air Force.

Queen's Commendation for Valuable Service in the Air

Flight Lieutenant Colin Lilico COCKBURN (578332), Royal Air Force.

For his exceptional courage, calmness, skill and judgment, as navigator and winch operator of a helicopter called to the assistance of a pleasure cruiser, "Rossekop 2", aground at night, in heavy seas, on Bideford Bar, North Devon. With only the aircraft landing lights in which to observe obstructions and with only a small section of the deck, approximately six feet square, near the bows on to which the winchman could be lowered, Flight Lieutenant Cockburn was the vital link between the helicopter pilot and winchman in the successful lifting to safety of the ten people on board the vessel.
