Falmouth, Octob. 24.

THe ill weather which has continued for 9 or 10 days together, has not suffered any ships to come into this Port, and consequently kept us from all other news but of the several wrecks to the Westwards of this place, but as yet we have no account what ships they were.

Minchhead, Octob. 25. Besides the Two Dutch ships laden with Oyls and Sugars, which were lost by the late tempestuous weather upon these coasts; there perished also the Samaritan of Cork, a small vessel laden from Cork in Ireland with Wooll and Tallow, bound for this place. We hear of several other wrecks which happened about the same time in the Channel, of which we expect the particulars.

Naples, Sept. 29. Our Vice-Roy Don Pedro d' Arragon is making preparation of an extraordinary Train and Equipage for his Ambassy of Obedience, which he intends to perform at Rome about the end of October, and afterwards to return to Madrid; is believed that the Marquis d' Astorga, the Spanish Ambassador at Rome, may succeed him in this Vice-Royalty, to which there wants not many pretenders in the Court of Spain.

In the mean time Don Pedro is endeavouring to leave all things under his Government in a good and quiet posture, and to suppress the Banditi, who have put a great stop to Trade, by infesting all the highways; a considerable force is upon this account lately sent against them, upon whose appearance tis supposed they will retire to their fastnesses.

Several Gallies are fitting up, and some already employed to change the Garrisons of Porto Longone and other places belonging to his Catholick Majesty upon the coasts of Tuscany.

From Sicily we are told, that the Vice-Roy of that Island the Prince de Ligne, has called an Assembly of the States, to consider of the best method for their defence against the Turks, who by their preparations for action against the Spring, (tis apprehended) may make some descent upon them, and has employed several Engineers to take a view of the coasts in order to the building of convenient Forts in such places as shall be thought most liable to danger.

Frankfort, Octob. 11. Some Ministers belonging to the Duke of Lorraine, are here publishing a large Manifest against the proceedings of the French in their late invasion of Lorraine.

The Senate here has been so wrought upon by the apprehensions of future dangers, that they have by beat of Drum and sound of Trumpet, forbid any Leavies to be made in this City, and that no Officers be suffered to stay in Town upon any such account.

The States of the Empire assembled at Ratisbon, have so far taken into Consideration the present condition of the Duke of Lorraine, that they have thought fit to desire his Imperial Majesty to interpose for his restoration; and to endeavour that it may be rather peaceably obtained and by the way of negotiation.

Warsaw, Octob. 18. The Deputies appointed by both the Chambers of the Diet, to examine the Articles of High Treason which were brought in against the Grand Treasurer Morstein, having found that the Citation for his appearance was not given him Six weeks before the Session, according to the Custom and Law of the Countrey, have granted him time till the next Diet to prepare for his defence: but Grimoltzsky the Castellan of Posen is to be suddenly brought to his Trial, but with liberty to substitute an Advocate to answer for him: he is himself departed from this place, not out of fear (as he pretends) of any thing which can be laid to his charge; but out of jealousy, lest his Presence might draw his Enemies to use violence to his person, of which he was sufficiently sensible at the Assembly at Scroda.

The Archbishop of Gnesne having with some difficulty vindicated himself from the accusations drawn from his own writings, wherein the Kings Honour was much concerned, is gone from hence to Lowitz, the place of his usual Residence, whither he ordered a large quantity of Wine to be sent for the entertainment of the Officers of the Militia, who, he feared, might Quarter too severely upon his lands; but he has obliged himself to be back again to assist at the Ceremonies of the Queens Coronation.

Yesterday arrived here the Count Schaffgotsch, Envoy Extraordinary from his Imperial Majesty, to assist at the Coronation, which is to be performed to morrow with great solemnity.

Yesterday the Dutch Ambassador was according to the usual form, admitted to his Audience from their Majesties, complimenting them upon their Marriage, and their advancement to the Crown of Poland.

On Wednesday last the Vice-Chancellor made his Entry with a considerable Train.

We have great hopes of a happy conclusion of this Diet, since the Nuncio's have made several resolves, all of them tending to the strengthening of his Majesty in his Throne, and the peace of the Kingdom, and have sent them to the Senators for their concurrence.

The Deputies of the Army, some days since had an Audience from the Diet, where they demanded full satisfaction and payment of all their arrears, and the reinforcement of their Regiments, that so they might be in a better posture to oppose the Turks and Tartars if they should have any designe to disturb the frontiers; complaining that their actions had been ill expounded and represented to the Diet, and desiring that a Committee of the Senators and Nuncios might be appointed to consider of what they should propose to them in relation to the Army; to which they received only a general answer, viz. That his Majesty would consider and advise with the Senators about the fittest way to give them satisfaction.

Brussels, Nov. 1. His Excellency the Count de Montreux having been informed of the arrival of his Lady at Paris, went hence on Tuesday last with a great train of the Nobility to Enguyen, intending tending to proceed as far as Cambray to meet her ; and to conduct her hither , where preparations are made for her solemn reception. The Duke of Aremberg lately arrived here , and kindly received by his Excellency , went hence two or three days before , to prepare for his Excellency's reception and entertainment at Enguyen , and to be present at Mons , at the Assembly of the States of Haynault , of which Province he is Governour.

His Excellency has caused his orders to be issued out to all the Governours of the several Garrisons within his jurisdiction , upon pain of death forbidding any Souldiers to beg upon the high-ways , or to do any injury whatsoever to the Country People , either in their goods , or by obliging them to take protections or safeguards.

Upon the late reformation of the horse , the nine Spanish Regiments are reduced to 18 Troops a piece , and the three Regiments of Italians , to 12. Of the 6 Regiments of Walloons , the old ones are reduced to 14 Troops , and the new to 12 , each Troop to consist of 60 men besides Officers. The English Regiment is reduced to 12 Troops , and the German to 10. His Excellency intends so to dispose of the Army , that it shall for the future consist of about 30000 foot , and 5000 horse , and these to be well paid and disciplined , towards which the several Provinces are willing to contribute their proportions.

Hague, Nov. 4. The 1st instant his Highness the Prince of Orange parted hence with a Train of 9 or 10 Coaches to Delft , and from thence went and embarked himself at the Brille upon one of the Yachts which there attended for his transportation into England , but the other Yacht happening to be scared of water near Flaerdings , kept them so long , that the Tide was spent , and then the winds rising , even to a storm , his Highness returned hither again the next day where he is in hourly expectation of more favourable weather.

Here is lately arrived th Baron de Risancourt sent hither from the Duke of Lorraine to reside here for some time , and with him the late Governour of Nancy , who as is said intends in few days to embark for England.

We are in daily expectation of the arrival of several ships from Muscovy , and with them Two Ambassadors from the Great Duke , tis not yet known what will be the subject of their Embassy , but tis believed they may desire some succors and assistance against the great and successful Rebel Stepan Thimetheowitz Radzin , who having first taken Zariza upon the Volga , and afterwards Astracan and Casan , is now marching towards Moscow the Capital City , with a victorious and numerous Army , inasmuch as the Great Duke having not an Army strong enough to meet him in the field , is thinking to retire himself to Archangel upon the White sea.

This day the States of Holland are reassembled , but their number being not yet compleat , they entered not upon any affairs of concernment.

A Fleet of 28 ships is lately arrived at the Texel from St. Hubes , only one of them was unfortunately cast away upon the entry into that place , but all the men saved ; with this Fleet came in also one ship from Guiny richly laden. The Vice-Admiral Van Gheut has been seen before the Texel , but is not yet entered , being kept out by the ill weather.

Our Letters from Frankfort inform us , that the Commissioners that were Deputed to adjust the differences and disputes between the Duke of Lorraine and the Count de Nassau , have concluded that affair , and are since gone to Hombourg and Sarwerden , and have given Order to the Governours to obey for the future the Count de Nassau , whose Arms are every where set up in the room of those of the Duke of Lorraine ; and Lutheran Ministers appointed to preach in the places of the Roman Catholics.

The Bishop of Strasbourg is gone to meet his Electoral Highness of Cologne , who is on his return from Italy by the way of Bavaria.

The Portugal Ambassador having taken his leave of the States , and received from them a Present of a Gold Chain , to the value of about 6000 Florins , went hence the first instant in the States Coach , attended by a Train of above 40 others out of the Town , intending to pass by the way of Flanders into England.

Paris, Nov. 6. The Heer de Groot , Ambassador from the States-General of the United Provinces is in daily expectation of an answer from the Court to the Memorial which he has given in concerning the impositions upon imported Goods and Manufactures of Holland : he has not yet made his publick Entry , which is like to be deferred for a fortnight longer , till the Kings return from Versailles.

There is lately arrived at Port Louis in Bretagne , a small vessel of 15 Tuns only , which was built at Fermambouc in Brazille , for the use of the French East-India Company , and was sent from thence with Four men only and a Pilot to Madagascar , and afterwards to Surat , from whence he was ordered to sail for France by Monsieur de Montevergue , who intends shortly to follow on his return home.

London, Octob. 29. This night arrived here Sir Nicholas Armorer , one of His Majesties Equerries in Ordinary from Margate , giving His Majesty an account of the safe arrival of his Highness the Prince of Orange this morning at that place , having on Thursday last embarked at the Briel upon one of His Majesties Yachts which there attended for his transportation , and that the other Yacht with his Highnesses Train and Baggage , was not yet arrived , but might be suddenly expected.

Octob. 30. This evening his Highness arrived at Whitehall , having immediately after his landing at Margate , taken Post from thence to Canterbury , and thence passed by Coach to Rocheſter , where his Highness lodged the last night , and came this morning to Gravesend , where he was attended by Sir Charles Cotterel , Master of the Ceremonies , with His Majesties Barges , and so conducted to Whitehall , having in his passage been saluted by the Great Guns from the Tower : being landed at Whitehall , his Highness was received at the stairs foot by the Lord Chamberlain of His Majesties Household , and conducted to the Presence of both their Majesties , who received him with all possible demonstrations of affection and joy , as did likewise their Royal Highnesses , to whom he was in the like manner conducted by the Lord Chamberlain , and thence to the Apartment prepared for him in the Cockpit.
