To provide prophylaxis against the introduction of infection into the urinary tract during instrumental procedures. 5. Asymptomatic bacteriuria. Methenamine hippurate is readily absorbed from the gastro-intestinal tract and excreted via the kidney. With Hiprex, as with other specific urinary antibacterial agents of this type, antibacterial activity is confined to the urinary tract. The antibacterial action is achieved by the slow release of the bactericidal formaldehyde, from the methenamine part, in the urine; acid pH less than pH 5.5 is necessary for this reaction to occur. It is obtained and maintained there by the presence of hippuric acid. Hiprex has a wide bacterial spectrum covering both gram-positive and gram-negative organisms. it is active against the bacteria which most commonly cause urinary tract infection—Escherichia coli, Aerobacter aerogenes, Pseudomonas and some strains of Proteus. Urinary antibacterial activity can be shown within 30 minutes of administration.

Consent to demoliton may be applied for separately, or as a specific part of a planning permission application for redevelopment. In assessing whether consent should be given for demolition, the Authority will have regard to the importance of the building to the character or appearance of any part of the Conservation Area. A list of those descriptions of demolitions which have been exempted by the Secretary of State, and so can be carried out without consent, is deposited for inspection with the plans of the Conservation Area referred to in (7) above.

(c) No tree in the Conservation Area may be cut down, topped, lopped, uprooted, wilfully damaged or wilfully destroyed without the consent of the Local Planning Authority and a duty is placed on landowners to replace trees which are destroyed or die unless the Authority dispense with this requirement in a particular case.

(d) Arrangements will be made by the Council for publicising all significant planning applications in the Conservation Area, so as to enable the public to submit comments to the Local Planning Authority before they make their decision on the applications.

The Conservation Areas have been designated because of their special architectural or historic interest and the Council intends to prepare in the future schemes for the preservation and enhancement of the Conservation Areas and there will be public consultation before such schemes are implemented.
