

East Goths are come hither, and the Dalcarlia Regiment of Infantry of 1200 Men is expected; which are all to be quartered on the Housekeepers here, without any exception of Quality, the Senators not having exempted themselves. Some days ago the Regency published two Placarts which the King lately sent from Turkey: In the one he admonishes his People to render true Accounts of their whole Estates both real and personal to those who are appointed to make the Assessments, and not elude his Majesty's gracious Intention of establishing a just Equality among all his Subjects in their Taxes, by concealing any part thereof, as he is informed many have done; and threatens with his displeasure those who upon inquiry shall be discovered to have given in false Valuations. The other forbids the receiving hereafter of any Corn or other kinds of Provisions, in lieu of Money, for Taxes; in which manner the Peasants were ever generally allowed to pay theirs. Yesterday the principal Burghers of the City were summoned to the Town-House, where General Meyerteld in the Name of the Princess and Senate desired an immediate Loan of 50000 Crowns, for some Service which he represented to be of the utmost Importance, assuring them it should be repaid with Interest out of the first Money that comes in of next Year's Taxes: But the Burghers pleading Inability, he could only get a Promise from some of them that they would endeavour to raise it if possible on their own Credit. This Money, if it can be procured, is designed to be remitted to Hambourg for a present supply of the King's Occasions on his coming into Pomerania, whither General Meyerteld is in readiness to pass over to his Majesty on the first certain Notice of his Arrival.

The Advices from Vienna and from Ratisbon, do not give any Account of the King of Sweden's having yet passed through any part of the Emperor's Dominions, on his Journey to Pomerania: But Letters from Stralsund of the 24th Instant, and from Hambourg of the 27th relate, that his Swedish Majesty arrived incognito at Stralsund the 22d, with only one Officer and two Servants; the 23d the Duke Administrator of Holstein set out from Hambourg for Stralsund.
