The Order area lies immediately north of the A66 Trunk road, about 2.5 kilometres east of North Stainmore and 5.5 kilometres east of Brough. The area lies within the North Pennines area of outstanding natural beauty but has no other conservation status.

The site is composed of open pasture fields divided in the centre by a farm track. There is no public right of way across the farmland. The fields lie on a small plateau at 270 metres at the foot of Great Knipe. The pavements are open and mainly surrounded by rabbit and sheep grazed grassland. They are clearly visible from the A66 (Trunk Road) and a nearby parking area. The outcrops which form gently sloping sheets are mainly concentrated on the southern portion of the site, while in the northern part the pavements are more scattered. No recent damage to the pavements has been noted.

A wide range of grasses and herbs are found mostly in the grikes and occasionally in the surface solution features of the pavements. An area which has been experimentally fenced from grazing has grikes filled with tall grasses and a luxuriant, but less diverse, growth of herbs. A number of ferns are also present. The total area of the site is 20.9 hectares.

Further details of the landscape, flora, geology and physiographic interest of the site is contained in the notification, a copy of which is available on request.

The southern area lies partly within the Birkett Hill and High Out Wood Site of Special Scientific Interest and the whole site is within the North Pennines AONB.

The site is divided into two distinct areas. The northern area (Hartley) lies on open fell side above the village marked by traces of ancient settlements, quarries and workings. The pavements here occur as scattered, steeply dipping outcrops which become larger and more continuous to the north. Some of the outcrops are visible from Birkett Lane while the larger outcrops form a distinctive landscape feature viewed from the Kirkby Stephen-Brough road.

The southern part (High Out Wood) lies on a small hill which although grazed is partly wooded on its lower slopes and more open towards the summit. A series of scarps run across the hill and the pavements are found as open and steeply dipping outcrops on north or east facing slopes becoming increasingly tree covered on the western or lower slopes. The outcrops are not easily seen from public roads and footpaths.

The small areas of wooded pavement occur under ash, holly, hazel and hawthorn while the ground flora is extremely varied and includes a number of uncommon species. Some signs of past damage are noticeable but there is no evidence of recent damage. The total area of the site is 80.8 ha.

Further details of the landscape, flora, geology and physiographic interest of the site is contained in the notification, a copy of which is available on request.

SCHEDULE TO THE ORDER

The Order area lies on Smardale Fell approximately 2 km south of the village of Crosby Garrett, 4 km south-west of Kirkby Stephen. A small part of the site lies within the Smardale Gill SSSI, while to the east the site is adjacent to the Ash Fell SSSI.

The site lies above the steep, wooded slopes of Smardale Gill on the open flanks of Smardale Fell. The pavements on the west side of the site are directly above Smardale Gill with the land falling away very steeply on the west, this being marked by a series of scars known collectively as Witches Stride. As the highest point on this side of the gill they form a spectacular landscape feature which can be seen from many of the public footpaths in the area. Those on the north side of the site form a distinct feature on the side of a small valley containing a seasonal stream. This can easily be seen from a bridleway which runs from Smardale Hall. The remaining outcrops are more scattered and less easy to see from public rights of way.

The pavements at Smardale are mostly open with occasional small, twisted and wind blown hawthorn bushes growing in the grikes. The general appearance of the flora is grassy but where grikes are deeper and narrower typical pavement vegetation, including herbs, occurs. No recent damage to the pavement has been noted. The total area of the site is 37.6 has.
