The proposal is to abstract water at the following rates: 275,000 cubic metres per day, 55,000,000 cubic metres per year in total. The water will be used for public water supply purposes after treatment at Coppermills water treatment works.

This proposal forms the North London Artificial Recharge Scheme, and replaces the licences that exist for the Lee Valley and Enfield Haringey artificial recharge schemes. This proposal does not increase the existing total licensed quantity, but it does include additional points of abstraction to provide greater operational flexibility and effectiveness. Use of the scheme will be governed by an Operating Agreement between the National Rivers Authority and Thames Water Utilities Ltd. During times when demand for water is low the output from Coppermills works can be used to supply customers also provide water that can be recharged into the chalk aquifer. During periods of high demand or when resources are low, such as during droughts, the stored water in the aquifer can be abstracted and pumped directly or via the New River into the Lee Valley reservoir system for subsequent treatment at Coppermills works. This application is for the necessary abstraction licence that will authorise TWUL to abstract water from the aquifer. The necessary consents for the recharge of water into the aquifer have already been obtained.

A copy of the application and any map, plans and other documents submitted with it may be inspected free of charge at all reasonable hours between Monday, 10th April 1995 and Friday, 12th May 1995 at the following locations:
