

Marvejol in the Gevaudan of the 17th part, the Plague carries off there to the Number of 50 People a-Day. All the Troops that were in that Canton have been drawn out and posted upon the Frontiers of Languedoc, to prevent if possible all Communication with the infected Places. They write from Lyons, that the Apprehensions of the Approach of the Distemper increase daily, and that the Magistrates had resolved to draw a Line, in order to secure their City so much the better against the Communication with the Neighbouring Places that are infected, or suspected of Infection. Several Physicians and Surgeons were sent some Days ago from hence to the Gevaudan, to assist the poor Inhabitants there. An Ordinance of the King's is under the Press, regulating the Manner in which the Troops that guard the Passages of the infected Places are to behave themselves, and prohibiting all Persons whatsoever to stir out of the said Places on Pain of Death. The Cardinal de Rohan is expected back from Rome at his House at Saverne the 25th Instant, and the Cardinal de Bissy is likewise expected here within a few Days.

Chester, Sept. 4. Last Night his Grace the Duke of Grafton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, arrived here, and was complimented on his Entrance into this City by the Recorder in the Name of the Corporation: The other Compliments, of firing the Guns, ringing the Bells, and lining the Streets with the Soldiers quartered here, were likewise paid to his Grace on this Occasion. His Grace designs to proceed on his Journey towards Holyhead this Day at Noon.
