Fontainebleau, Oct. 29, N. S. . The King passed the Night of the 27th Instant very well, flept as usual; and the next Morning feveral Physicians who had been fent for, being arrived from Paris, they found his Majesty without any Pain, Fever, or Emotion, but fuch as are necessary to force out the Pimples, and which constantly attend the kindest and gentlest Eruption till the Disease has thrown it self quite out; which is now thought to be the Case, by the great Quantity of Pimples which have gradually and fuccessively covered his whole Body, and that in such a regular and easy Manner, that the first Eruptions are already drying up and disappearing, while the latter, after having risen to their proper Plumpness and Ma-turity, are in Suppuration. These happy and kindly Symptoms have determined the Phylicians to leave the Distemper to the natural Strength and Goodness of his Majesty's Constitution, and to assist with nothing but Bouillons and Crabs-Eyes. In this Situation his Majesty continued last Night, and slept without interrupion from Ten a-Clock till Seven this Morning, with the same Appearance of doing well; which, together with the Opinion of the Phylicians, that all the Humours are intirely broken out, and that the Distemper is to be dated from Sunday the 24th Instant, when his Majesty first began to be disordered, tho' he concealed it, and struggled against it, has filled this Court with the greatest Joy.

This Day their Majasties, with his Royal Highnels the Duke, the Princels Royal, their Royal Highnelles the Princelles Caroline, Mary, and Louisa, terurned from Windfor to relide here.
