Dresden, Nov. 4, N. S. We have different Advices as to the Czarina's Ratification of the Preliminaries of Peace between Her and the Porte. In the mean time, Count Munich waits his Orders at Choczim, having laid four Bridges on the Dniester, which makes some of the Poles fearful of his Motions and Designs of taking up his Winter Quarters in their Country. Deputies from the Palatinate of Belsk are arrived here, to petition the King, that they and their Courtiymen may have the Losses they have already suffered by the Cossacks made good to them; and that in case the Russian Troops should repass through Part of Poland, they may not winter there, but make as short a Stay as possible. Being admitted to an Audience of the King, he commanded the Vice-Chancellor of the Crown to assure them in his Presence, that having nothing more at Heart than the Preservation and Welfare of his faithful Subjects, he would, pursuant to their Request, cause the Instances to be repeated which had been already made to the Court of Russia on this Subject.
