

Tumult, contrary to what happened at Pisa, and which the Government were so apprehensive of on the Part of the People, that the few Cannon that are left in the two Castles were charged and pointed against the Town, except the first Day the two Gates of the Town which by they passed were shut when they came within Sight of them. M. de Castellar, who commanded the first Column, on Notice that a large Party of his Men had at once deserted, at the Instigation, as he pretends, of some of the Great Duke's Officers, and that they were in one of the Castles at Florence, wrote a very strong Letter to the Spanish Agent to bid him demand them, and to threaten the Government, that unless they were delivered up, he would leave a strong Body of Troops at all the Avenues of Florence, to prevent the like Inconvenience for the future. The Spanish Agent sent Marquess Castellar's original Letter to Prince Craon, accompanied with one much stronger from himself. The Regency refused however on this arbitrary Demand to give them up, but immediately sent an Officer to M. de Castellar to make some Sort of reciprocal Agreement with him on this Head.

Genoa, March 14. Letters from Madrid of the 27th past mention the Departure of Don Philip, after having, as is therein said, received the Investiture of the Duchies of Milan, Parma and Placentia, from the new Emperor.

Vienna, March 14. By a Letter from Budeweis of the 12th Instant, we are informed that the French had found Means to throw a Reinforcement into the Castle of Frauenberg, which lies upon the Mulda, between Budeweis and Piteck, and had been reduced to the last Extremity for Want of Provisions, and by Sckness, so that we were in hourly Expectation of its Surrender. This was effected by a Detachment of about 2000 Foot and 1200 Horse, which they sent on the 9th Instant, under the Command of the Duke de Boufflers, the Duke de Brisac, and the Chevalier de Broglie, who marched all Night, dislodg'd a Party of Hussars at Potewin, surprized the little Town of Wodnian in their Way, where they made 130 Prisoners, exchanged the Garrison of Frauenberg, and put a sufficient Quantity of Provisions and Ammunition into it, and then returned to Piteck, having again abandoned Wodnian. The French were obliged to pass and repass almost through the Middle of the Austrian Quarters for this Expedition. It is the Situation upon the River which makes the Castle of Frauenberg of any Importance, as hindring the immediate Communication by Water between Budeweis and Tain. The Sickness is general in Bohemia, not only amongst the Soldiers of both Armies, but amongst the Peasants, and even the better Sort of People, who are in equal Want of all Necessaries. Prince Lobkowitz is arrived at Waithoven, where the main Body is assembling in order to enter into Moravia. Four Deserters from General St. Ignon's Avant Guard at Waithoven having been examined, as is said, for above an Hour, by the King of Prussia at Znaim, his Prussian Majesty has retired from thence to Iritz, and left the Town to be possessed by the Saxons. We are in daily Expectation of some important Accounts from Marshal Khevenhuller, who has extended himself beyond the Leck. There is hardly a Day now but we have some Troops passing through this Town, or in the Neighbourhood from Hungary. There is a Report as if Count Rudolph Palfi had destroyed another Body of 800 Bavarians near Ingolstadt, said to be the Regiment of Freisingen.

Berlin, March 20. By Advices from Upper Silesia there is an Account, That on the 10th Instant in the Night, a considerable Number of the Austrian Hussars broke into the Suburbs of Olmutz, which they plundered during the Space of two Hours, till the Garrison of the Town beat to Arms; after which they retired to about a Mile Distance, where they joined another Body of Hussars of about 600. They have done a great Deal of Mischief at Olmutz, and among other Things, they have carried off 70 Artillery Horses, two or three Officers, a great deal of Baggage, some of the King of Prussia's Domesticks, and his head Groom, with 18 of his Mules, and 12 of his Saddle Horses.

Dresden, March 21. The Hussars are extremely troublesome in Moravia; they have lately taken a Captain in Schonberg's Regiment, who was carrying some particular Orders to his Colonel; and afterwards attacked three Companies of the said Regiment drawn out in a Plain, but with what Success is not published here. They have likewise taken two Prussian Officers at the Gates of Olmutz; and that Corps of Hungarians which entered Silesia by Jablunka, is, by Letters of the 17th Instant from Breslau, got to Oppelen, but will scarce be able to cross the Neiss without meeting with General Marwitz. His Prussian Majesty is expected here, as is likewise the Emperor, but the time of their coming seems uncertain.
