EOPLE were furprized here at the groundless Reports that were spread in several Places, of the Designs and Warlike Preparations of the Schach of Persia, and of the imminent Danger of this Empire, as if we were upon that Account under a Necessity of making great Preparations on this Side. It is true that the faid Schach had by feveral Motions given a Handle to conjecture, that he had fome hoftile Intentions against certain mountainous Countries contiguous to the Frontiers, and under the Protection of Ruffia, in order to make Amends for his unfuccessful Expedition against the Dagistans. But he prefently fhewed, that it was by no Means his Intention to undertake any Thing against Russia, and that he knew his own Strength too well to think of measuring it with her's; as the Troops, which are always in those Parts to cover the Frontiers on that Side, are abundantly fufficient to oppose any Enterprize on his Part, and even entirely to defeat it, without the neceflary Warlike Preparations in other distant Places suffering the least Diminution or Diversion thereby. And therefore it was never thought needful to make any farther Difpofitions upon the Frontiers of Persia on this Side, than only at all Events to bring the Regiments ftationed by Aftrachan near together, and to fend a Major-General to fill up the Place of one that died there. The Schach must naturally have reflected to much the more hereupon; as at that Time, according to our latest Advices, the Dagistan Nations, Inhabitants of the Mountains, (which are 70,000 fighting Men strong, and either act constantly against the Schach, or are kept under his Junifdiction by Force only) defired to fubmit themfelves to the Government of the Empress of Russia, and to be received by their Deputies, (whom they fent for that Purpose) into her Imperial Majesty's Protection, as her Subjects. These People alone are in a Condition to reftrain the Schach from any Enterprize against the Russian Frontiers (in Case he were to fuffer himfelf to be drawn into fuch an abfurd Attempt) and to give him fo much Work, that he would have Reafon to lay afide all other Views, and think of defending his own Poffeffions. And as being fully fentible of all this, he has of late given here many Assurances of his Friendship 2 And besides, from the Schach's own Situation, his Army being reduced to 20,000 Men, fatigued and infirm by the tedious and unfuccessful Expedition against the Dagistans, and especially from the above-mentioned Circumstances, the Reports of the Schach's great Preparations, and of the imminent Danger of this Empire, are fufficiently confuted. Wherefore it was judged necellary to inform the Publick of this Affair for the Confutation of all falfe Reports foread in relation thereto.

Oporto, Feb. 2. Yesterday Morning the Fleet from England, under Convoy of his Britannick Majesty's Ship Success, arrived off this Bar, and in the Asternoon all the Vessel bound hither got faste in, when the Success proceeded to Lisbon with the Ships bound to that Harbour.

Lisbon, Feb. 12. The 7th Inftant the Kinghad another Fit, but upon Bleeding his Majefty foon came to himfelf, and fince remains just as he was before.

Newbourg in the Upper Palatinate, Feb. 6. From the Time that Prince Lobkowitz came hither from Prague, the Enemy has been retreating, having abandoned one Place after another. General Fin has had Orders to advance farther on with fome Regiments to diflodge the Enemy. Forgatich is gone upon some Errand. Festetitž blockades Egra. Laff Sunday all the Magistrates of the Upper Palatinate were fummoned hither, and the Contributions for the Army, were fettled with them. The French General Lavard having Notice of the Approach of our Infantry, abandoned Weiden with 200 Men the 31st past; whereupon Colonel Piofafco marched with 100 in Purfuit of them; and killed fome, and took an Officer and 16 Soldiers Prifoners without the Lois of a Man. The faid Place of Weiden being the chief Paffage in the Palatinate towards Amberg, we have put a fmall Garrifon into it for the Defence of the Bridge. The Enemy has likewife abandoned Scwandorf, Naaburg, Pfeiembt, Lierschenzeid, and Falkenberg, and confequently the whole Course of the Naab, fo that all Communication between Egra and the French Army is now cut off, Since our Arrival in these Parts we have taken above an Hundred of the French Prisoners.

Translation from the German of Count Traun's Relation of the Action at Campo Santo.

THE Enemy having very unexpectedly refol-ved to pais the Panaro, and actually put this Plan in Execution the 3d Inftant near Cam-po Santo, I march'd the same Day with Ten Battallions and a Part of the Cavalry to Buon Porto, where, during the 4th and 5th, I received two Regiments of the Sardinian Cavalry, and the reft of the Queen's Troops: The Enemy fent a large Detachment to reconnoitre us, as if he meant to attack us, but finding that Defign elmost impracticable, after the Junction of our feveral Corps, he not only countermanded the faid Detachment, but took Post at Campo Santo, where he had his whole Army. His Intention was as fome Officers that we took Prifoners have informed us, had we not advanced to Solera, to have repais'd the Panaro, and Orders were actually given for that Purpole : But upon, the
