From the Austrian Head Quarters at Valpring in Bavaria, March 28, N. S.

Upon the 21st of this Month the Troops under General Bathiani passed the Inn in three Columns at Passaw, Scharfing, and Braunaw, and a Body of Hussars was immediately detached towards Pfarkirchen, in order to cut off the Enemy's Garrison there. Upon the 22d General Trips, who commanded this Corps, attacked the Enemy's Avant Guard near Trifflurn, and having killed some of their Hussars, the rest retired towards Pfarkirchen, in which Place there were about 600 Men, who at first made a very brisk Fire upon our People; but the Hussars having attacked them Sword in Hand, they at last took to Flight. In this Rencounter we made four Officers and above 200 Men Prisoners of War. Upon the 24th we bombarded the Castle of Griesbach, the Garrison of which quickly surrendered at Discretion. Soon after having received Advice, that the Enemy had abandoned Allspach and Eggenfelden, General Bathiani advanced towards Vilshoven, in which Place there are two entire Regiments of Hessians, some Troops belonging to the Bavarian Corps, and some Hussars, in all about 3000 Men. We have already invested the Town, and having made all the Dispositions necessary for a formal Attack, we hope very soon to be Masters of it. To-morrow General Bathiani sets out for Vienna, and the Command of the Army will be left to Lieutenant-General Velt Marshal Count Broune.

Munich, April 1, N. S. Yesterday Morning an Express arrived from Landshut, with Advices from Marshal Count Thoring, importing, that on Monday last the Austrians before Vilshoven having sent a Trumpet to M. de Schaffat, who commanded there for the Elector of Bavaria, demanding the Surrender of the Place, and that not being comply'd with, they began immediately to cannonade and bombard it; and that the City having thereby been set on Fire in several Places, whilst the Garrison was employed in extinguishing it, the Austrians had broken in, and cut to Pieces the greatest Part of them, consisting of three Hessian Battallions, one of which was Guards; and a great Detachment of the Bavarian Guards, in all near 1800 Men. We are every Minute expecting a more particular Account of this Action. What is above was related to Count Thoring, first by an Officer's Servant, and afterwards by a Hessian Corporal, who had both made their Escape from Vilshoven, after the Storming of it by the Austrians.
